The Turnback

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

A roll-back of approximately 10 per cent in the retail prices of beef, veal, pork, lamb, mutton, coffee and butter was ordered last night by Price Administrator Prentiss Brown to go into effect June 1.

This sweeping move is but one in a series that will be made to return living costs to the level of last September 15, the Price Administrator declared.

To prevent the rollback reaching the farmer and thus possibly "having an adverse effect on production," subsidy payments to processors have been recommended, the funds to come from the RFC.

Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes said he was asking Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones, who also heads the RFC, to take "necessary steps" to put the OPA subsidy program into effect, and Jones, in a later statement, said that he will cooperate, "with the approval of the President."

Cost of Plan Studied

Although mechanics of the subsidy operations have not yet been completed, it was believed the Commodity Credit Corp.'s facilities would be utilized and it was reported that a fund of 500 million dollars was being created for the purpose.

Estimates on total cost to the Government of stabilizing and rolling back the cost of foods yesterday varied from one-half billion to several billion dollars annually, but OPA officials expressed belief 2.5 per cent could be squeezed from the

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, appeared last night to be laying the groundwork for another general coal strike at the expiration of the present 15-day truce in the face of a new presidential warning—that the miners are now Government employes, presumably without the right to strike.

First threat came from Pittsburgh, where John P. Busarello, president of District 5 of the U. M. W., announced that the miners in his key Pennsylvania soft coal district would not work after midnight, May 18, in the absence of a contract.

This was followed up by the first strike since the government seized the mines last Saturday—at the largest "captive mine" of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Co. at Pittsburgh, where 1400 walked out late yesterday. Union officials said the truce-breaking walkout was not authorized.

WLB Hearings Continue

Meanwhile, a special three-man War Labor Board panel continued hearings on the coal wage dispute in the absence of Lewis, who has repeatedly defied and challenged the jurisdiction of the WLB.

Busarello said the executive board of District 5 had acted on the question after hearing reports from the recent New York meeting of the International Executive Board of the U. M. W. by adopting the following resolution:

"The officers and members of District 5 will carry out the traditional policy of 'no contract, no work', effective as of midnight May 18, 1943."

Customarily, such major policy actions are not taken without the

LAST STAND ON PENINSULA—Remnants of the Axis armies poured east toward the Cape Bon Peninsula (shaded arrow) yesterday after the Yankees and French took Bizerte and the British captured Tunis. Solid lines compare battlefronts on May 6 and 7

Enemy Lines Are Crumbling Throughout North Africa; Remnant Still Holds Out Near Enfidaville Sector

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, May 7.—Tunis and Bizerte were captured in mid-afternoon today by triumphant Allied troops striking in overwhelming force with the aid of the greatest supporting aerial barrage in history.

Bizerte, the naval base in the north, fell to the American Doughboys at 4:15 P. M. (12:15 P. M. E. W. T.) and Tunis, the capital, was conquered five minutes later by British First Army troops in the blazing coordinated drives climaxing two days of fierce battle. The occupation of the two cities came one day less than six months after the American landing in North Africa.

Roads from both cities were choked tonight with German and Italian troops and tanks and trucks fleeing to the coastal hills below Bizerte, and to Cap Bon Peninsula.

Allied war planes pounded and slashed relentlessly at the retreating columns.

Rear guard troops still were fighting in the capital but fierce struggles on the outskirts of cities failed to halt the Allied drive.

Axis Armies Crushed on Holiday Eve

The Axis armies thus were crushed in their two main African bases on the eve of "Joan of Arc Day."

Thus collapsed the Axis defenses throughout North Tunisia except for strong elements still entrenched in the hills between the plain of Tunis and Enfidaville in positions already menaced by the British Eighth Army.

The two cities were conquered in the mightiest offensive of the African war, in a shattering final drive that raced through crumbling German positions.

At 9 p. m. headquarters announced that fighting still was continuing inside both cities, but the remaining resistance was expected to be wiped out soon.

This last-ditch defense apparently was designed to give the fleeing bulk of the enemy a chance to escape to the hills of the Cap Bon Peninsula in the northeast.

[Cap Bon where the Axis was reported recently to be building wooden piers, is only 90 miles from Sicily, and if the Germans and Italians attempt to evacuate remnants of their armies they would probably try to do so at night. Fast ships could make round trips at night—Editor's note.]

Allies Capture Many Prisoners

Large numbers of prisoners were taken in both cities and in the fighting outside.

American units plunged 9 miles to Bizerte and British First Army forces advanced 14 miles in the fiercest kind of fighting today to capture the cities.

The Americans of the Second Corps encountered terrific opposition in their push to Bizerte, but after taking Ferryville at 1 p. m. today, the Yank columns converged upon the naval base in a tremendous drive by armor and infantry.

In the final battle before Tunis, British armor and infantry smashed the positions which the Germans had hastily erected. The Germans fought fiercely there.

Just before the break into Tunis itself the British had taken Le Bardo, home of the Bey of Tunis, but it has not yet been determined whether the Bey was there or was taken to the continent by the Germans, who had elevated him to "King of Tunisia."

Allied air forces were again complete masters of the skies today. The Axis air force was almost nonexistent.

American and British airmen pounded thousands of bombs upon the retreating enemy, smashing explosives along the congested roads of retreat full of men and trucks and tanks, with vehicles often bumper to bumper.

Crack German troops were among the units that fell back before the Allied onslaught.

Airmen who struck at shipping in the Straits of Sicily saw a number of boats carrying Axis troops across to Sicily, indicating that a partial evacuation was being attempted, but it was on a small scale.

A large percentage of the ships was being sunk. It now seems most probable that the Axis cannot attempt a large-scale evacuation.

The final lap of this campaign in the north—now well into its third week—became a race between the Americans for Bizerte and the British for Tunis in a highly coordinated plan in which the two displayed great teamwork. The British Eighth Army and the French meanwhile pressed on the enemy in the south.

The greatest such air barrage in history prepared the way all along for the Allied advances, taking fearful toll of enemy arms and men.

It was credited with helping to keep casualties among the Allied

Cleveland Firm Indicted Under Sabotage Law

Defective Castings Made for Plane Engines, Is Charge

Attorney General Biddle announced yesterday that the National Bronze and Aluminum Foundry Company and seven of its top officials had been indicted at Cleveland, Ohio, on charges of violating the sabotage law and conspiring to defraud the Government.

Biddle said the charges were based upon allegations that the defendants had conspired with 21 company employes—named as co-conspirators—and with others to supply the Packard Motor Car Company with defectively cast aluminum superchargers for Rolls Royce Airplane engines being made for the Government.

The indictment, in nine counts, charges that defective castings were "deliberately" welded and plugged in violatin of specifications, the attorney general said, and these violations were concealed from Packard.

It is charged also, Biddle said, that the alleged conspirators removed heat and serial numbers from rejected castings, repaired the castings and returned them to Packard with new numbers. He said the defendants also are accused of misrepresenting the source of test bars supplied to Packard.

$12.50 Average Increase Ordered In Next Pay Check

The average District government employe will receive $12.50 more in his envelope beginning next payday, according to the instructions sent District department heads yesterday by District Auditor Ray Pilkerton.

These tables, designed to explain how to make out payrolls in terms of the recently passed Overtime Pay Act, show how to compute the raise increases for the present 44-hour week, for a possible 48-hour week, and for intermittent workers.

The lowest raise is $7.50, or 25 per cent of the basic $720 salary. Employes making from $1200 to $2700 will all get the flat increase of $300 per annum. In this bracket falls the average District salary of $1800. The person making $2800 gets a unique raise of $12.64, and from $2900 to the top rate of $12,000—for the presiding justice of the United States District Court there is a raise of $13.00.

Senate Group For Ruml Plan In 'Principle'

By Cecil B. Dickson
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

The Senate Finance Committee last night voted, 13 to 6, to base the new pay-as-you-go tax legislation on the general principles of the Ruml plan, after junking the House-approved Robertson-Forand bill.

Eight Republicans and five Democrats, including Senators Lucas of Illinois, Clark of Missouri, Gerry of Rhode Island, Walsh of Massachusetts and Radcliffe of Maryland, cast the decisive vote. Only five Democrats and Senator La Follette (Progressive) of Wisconsin voted against the Ruml plan.

Chairman George (Democrat) of Georgia said he hoped the committee could wipe out differences today on the windfall provisions in the Ruml plan, which was defeated in the House by the close vote of 202 to 206.

Clark Backs Ruml Plan

Action came after the committee heard its own expert, Colin F. Stam, explain the House bill failed to put all taxpayers on a pay-as-you-go basis, the real purpose of the legislation.

Senator Clark (Democrat) of Missouri made the fight for the Ruml plan, which, according to Treasury

U. S. Air Base Near Kiska Menaces Japs

Island's Occupation Seen as Threat to Enemy's Mainland

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

American forces have established an air base on Amchitka Island—only 63 nautical miles from Japanese-held Kiska—and have that far Aleutian Island under steady aerial attack, the Navy disclosed yesterday.

Occupation of Amchitka was accomplished without opposition in January, the Navy said, and the air field completed sometime afterward. Its construction has made it possible for American planes to shuttle back and forth pounding Kiska as many as 15 times in one day.

The new advance base is 1927 nautical miles northwest of Tokyo and 1652 miles from the northernmost point of Honshu, the Japanese main island on which all its principal cities are located.

This is outside of the radius of action of present bombers, but newer model planes now building are said to have a much greater range than our present Liberators

Resigns in Protest

Harper, Top Aide to McNutt, Quits as Deputy WMC Chief

Fowler V. Harper, former professor of law at the University of Indiana and one of Paul V. McNutt's right-hand men in the formation of the War Manpower Commission, has resigned as deputy chairman of WMC to take a post with another Government agency, it was learned last night.

Harper declined to discuss his resignation or to reveal the name of the Government agency he will go to shortly, but friends stated that he quit in protest against recent changes in the organization which, in his belief, have placed management in a dominant role to the disadvantage of organized labor.

WMC has shifted "to the right of center," Harper's friends said, since Lawrence A. Appley, president of Vicks Chemical Co., was brought into the WMC some months ago to act as executive director. Since Appley became executive director, Harper, generally considered a New Dealer, was denied access to the management-labor policy committee of WMC, top advisory body. Harper was said to feel that the management members were allowed to dominate that body.

FOWLER HARPER

Recently, Harper's office, which adjoined McNutt's, was shifted down the corridor, with Appley taking over Harper's former office. Associates placed considerable significance in the shift in offices at the time.

Sub Chief Floats Off to Death But Saves His Craft and Crew

A new name was inscribed high on the list of the Navy's immortals yesterday—that of a wounded submarine skipper who gave his life to save his crew and craft from the gunfire of an enemy warship.

With a final order, "Take her down," Comdr. Howard W. Gilmore rode the bridge of his diving submarine to death in the night-blackened waters of the Pacific, a Navy communique disclosed. The crew, "Inspired by the courageous fighting spirit of their dead captain," brought the submarine safely to port.

For this exploit, unparalleled in the annals of the Nation's undersea squadrons, the soft-voiced veteran of a dozen years' experience in submarines was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor posthumously.

The New Orleans skipper's submarine was on patrol when it encountered a Japanese gunboat watching for just such United States raiders, the Navy related.

COMDR. GILMORE

The sub was on the surface and the gunboat tried to ram it. It missed and the sub rammed the gunboat instead. The Japanese ship, its portside ripped wide open, began sinking. Its machine gun crews started pouring lead over the submarine's bridge.

Gilmore ordered the bridge cleared. Crewmen assigned there poured over the protective steel apron and into the conning tower hatch immediately below. According to all

Russians Destroy Or Damage 350 Planes in Day

London (Saturday), May 8 (AP).—The Russians announced tonight that 350 German planes massed along the front were destroyed or damaged in a great attack by the Russian air force on Thursday. Russian losses were 24 planes.

German airdromes over an area not specifically defined were reported raided by Russian bombers escorted by fighters.

Record Air Assault Pulverized Axis Area Before Infantry Swept Ahead

2500 Aerial Attacks Made In Single Day

Clinton Green
International News Service Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, May 7.—The Allied advance to Tunis and Bizerte was preceded by the greatest aerial assault ever launched in support of ground troops in the history of warfare.

Starting at 6 a. m. yesterday, Allied planes flew more than 2500 sorties—the largest number ever flown in a single day since the North African campaign got under way—and literally pulverized an area 4 miles long and 1000 yards wide.

(In London the Air Ministry announced that it was "the greatest air assault any army has ever had to stand."

("Bombs were planted so tightly together," the air ministry announcement said, "there could not have been many yards of surface untouched.")

20 Enemy Planes Destroyed

A total of 20 enemy planes were destroyed in combat, while only 10 Allied planes were reported missing.

While the tactical air force was clearing the way for British, American and French troops driving on Tunis and Bizerte, Maj. Gen. Jimmy Doolittle's long-range bombers sank 11 enemy vessels loaded with troops and supplies, damaged 16 others and wrought tremendous damage on enemy docks and installations in Sicily.

The total number of enemy ships sunk or damaged during the course of the day—27—also constituted a new high for the Allies in a single day's operations.

Enemy warships sent to the bottom included one destroyer, seven motor barges and four small troop-filled boats. Another Axis destroyer was directly hit and left burning.

Britain's Undersecretary of State for Air, Capt. Harold H. Balfour, arrived in Tunisia today and had an opportunity to see for himself at first hand the terrific destruction being wreaked on the enemy by Allied air forces, who enjoy undisputed mastery of the skies.

British Air Vice Marshal Sir Arthur Coningham, commander of the tactical air force, stood on one of the highest peaks in northern Tunisia and watched the bombers range over Axis-held territory in support of the British First Army's drive through the plains before Tunis.

Bombs Rain on Enemy

Virtually the entire weight of the tactical air force was thrown against the retreating Axis troops and the German defenses in front of Tunis. Most of the Allied bombs fell in the Medjerda Valley, running eastward to the Mediterranean north of Tunis.

Enemy guns, tanks and troops on bridges and hills commanding the area were repeatedly blasted and soon dust covered the entire valley with a yellow haze.

Except for artillerymen at the observation post, Coningham and his aides stood alone on the mountain peak watching the scene of utter devastation through their field glasses.

Waves of Bombers

Waves of allied bombers, starting out between 6 and 7 a. m., mingled out key enemy strongpoints around Furna and St. Cyprien and let them have it.

General Doolittle's fliers scored their first big success of the day against enemy shipping when a force of Martin Marauders (medium bombers), escorted by Lockheed Lightnings, spotted an Axis convoy of troop-laden motor barges and small craft about 30 miles west of Marittimo Island heading for Sicily. Marittimo Island is less than 20 miles from the Sicilian mainland.

The Lightnings sank three or four ferries and four other boats, while Marauders sent three more ferries to the bottom.

Simultaneously a formation of American Flying Fortresses from the Middle East command raided the docks at Marsala and Trapani in western Sicily, blasting six motor ferries and a supply ship in the harbors. One supply ship was probably sunk and another supply ship left burning.

Two medium-sized vessels were hit at Marsala, while three barges, ten small craft, a refuelling unit, a railroad yard and oil storage areas were hit at Trapani.

A Royal Air Force observer, commenting on Thursday's air action against the enemy, said that the main waves of American and British bombers concentrated their efforts against German positions in the area west of Massicault.

This area, four miles long and a thousand yards wide, got such a blanket blasting, with bombs landing scarcely two yards apart, that any human being who survived was just lucky.

"From dawn to 9:30 a. m.," the observer said, "the sky was mottled with bombers, each wave escorted by huge fighter formations. Soldiers of the First Army went forward, encouraged by the overhead umbrella to such an extent they were scarcely able to contain their enthusiasm. By God, what a show!"

Throughout the morning, only four Focke-Wulfs attempted to intercept the Allied bombers but obviously had little success. There was a brief lull during midday when a pall of dust lifted over the smoking battlefield and forced the low-flying bombers to wait until it cleared away.

'Drive Enemy Into the Sea,' Says Alexander Again on Field

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, May 7.—Gen. Sir Harold Alexander told his forces "we have reached the last phase of this campaign" and "are going to drive the enemy into the sea" in a special order of the day, on the night before the current Allied offensive began.

The order of the day, made public today, said:

"Soldiers of the Allies:

"Two months ago when the Germans and Italians were attacking us I told you that if you held fast, final victory was assured us.

"You did your duty and now you are about to reap its full reward.

"We have reached the last phase of this campaign. We have regrouped our victorious armies and are going to drive the enemy into the sea.

"We have got them just where we want them—with their backs to the wall.

"That final battle will be fierce, bitter and long and will demand all the skill, strength and endurance of each of us.

"But you have proved yourselves masters of the battlefield and therefore you will win this last great battle which will give us the whole of North Africa.

"The eyes of the world are on you and the hopes of those at home.

"Forward then to victory!"

Mast Appointed Resident General

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, May 7 (AP).—Gen. Henri Giraud announced tonight the appointment of Gen. Charles Mast as resident general of France in Tunisia. Gen. Alphonse Juin, commander of French troops in the field, will serve as resident general until the arrival of General Mast.

Mast now is in Beirut, Lebanon, recovering from serious injuries suffered in an accident in which a Colonel Baril was killed.

Gen. Rene Chambe, former secretary of information to Giraud, was appointed secretary of state without portfolio in the cabinet. Andre La Barthe was appointed secretary of information.

Allies Capture Tunis, Bizerte; Foe Flees Toward Cape Bon

ground troops at a minimum in their steamroller attacks.

Many of the captured German troops were shaken from unprecedented aerial pounding. Great numbers of fragmentation bombs as well as heavier caliber explosives were particularly demoralizing, they told their captors.

The Allied ground advances came so swiftly that the Axis commanders had little time to regroup their battered forces for the defenses of Tunis and Bizerte.

The Americans swarmed into Ferryville, power station for Bizerte only 8 miles south of the naval base, at 1 p. m. Reconnaissance units smashed forward and sped to the Bizerte outskirts, and more troops and armor raced up to pound into the naval base city by nightfall.

The British First Army, meanwhile, also taking heavy toll of the Axis troops, thrust armored fingers into Le Bardo, junction on the Bizerte-Tunis and Tunis-Djedeida highways, and without halt pounded on toward Tunis.

Allied headquarters issued special announcements telling first of the progress of Allied arms to the outskirts of Tunis and Bizerte, and then of the cities' fall. The regular communique earlier today told of capture of four strategic points by American troops, and the taking of 1000 prisoners.

The toll of prisoners rose tremendously through today's fighting.

(That the Axis might already be collecting ships for the purpose of evacuating their beaten troops was indicated in a broadcast by Grant Parr, N. B. C. reporter attached to Allied headquarters, who said 25 enemy ships had been "sunk in the Tunisian straits." He added that the "spirit of the German troops appears to have been broken.")

Among the German troops caught in the full-scale rout were some of Hitler's proudest divisions. They clogged the roads under a hell of high explosives from Allied bombers. Many fell prisoners before the concerted Allied rush.

Heavy losses were inflicted on the retreating enemy throughout the day in some of the war's fiercest fighting. Allied casualties were reported at a minimum.

"Because of complete air domination, the tactical air force was able to throw practically the whole of its weight against enemy armor and German defenses in front of Tunis, enabling our own troops to advance and capture all their objectives with a minimum of casualties," said a statement issued by the Allied air force.

Four-Mile Path Opened

The British First Army's spectacular drive on Tunis began at daylight yesterday. As Allied bombers blasted a path 4 miles long and 1000 yards wide with an earth-shaking barrage that blanketed virtually every yard of enemy-held ground, the British charged with a rush that could not be stemmed.

First the infantry cleared high ground and wiped out antitank positions, and then the tanks smashed into the van. The Germans threw 60 tanks into a desperate effort to halt the flow of men and machines, but they were routed and several destroyed. From there on the British pounded relentlessly across the plain to Tunis itself, and the weight of their steamroller made Axis defensive measures futile.

American detachments on the British left flank attacked the highlands guarding Chouigui, 21 miles west of Tunis, and before noon yesterday reached their objective in spite of strong enemy resistance. Their captives include some German elite troops, who, despite their experience and iron discipline, cracked under the furious bombing, shelling and tank and infantry assaults.

Nazis Cut Down Everywhere

St. Cyprien, a rallying point for the enemy's mobile reserves 10 miles west of Tunis, was smashed by more than 100 Allied bombers in a concentrated 10-minute attack in the afternoon. Everywhere Nazi positions were cut down and overrun remorselessly. British tanks on the southern flank sailed into an isolated German unit of 12 to 14 tanks and knocked out 5 of them for a loss of a single Sherman.

North of the Chouigui sector other American units crossed the river Tine and attacked a ridge on the east bank under heavy enemy fire. Still farther north, tank-supported United States detachments mopped up the last Axis resistance on Djebel Achkel, on the south shore of Lake Achkel. Six enemy antitank guns were wiped out with their crews.

French troops in the Pont Du Fahs area—south and west of the hardest fighting—were reported continuing their advance toward Zaghouan against strong opposition. Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British Eighth Army, stymied by elaborate mine fields in the Enfidaville sector, still played no prominent part in the present offensive. It reported an advance at one inland point nine miles northeast of Djebebina, about midway between that village and Zaghouan, in heavy fighting.

Nazis Threw Cooks Into Lines In Effort to Save Bizerte

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, May 7.—A delayed dispatch from Associated Press correspondent Harold V. Boyle at the front related today that the Germans, striving to stave off defeat before Bizerte, threw dock workers and cooks into their front lines.

Before the fall of the great naval port, Capt. George Mitchell, of Gainsville, Fla., said:

"They are putting all kinds of noncombatant troops into action to try to make up for the shortage in manpower," Mitchell continued.

"We captured one German soldier who previously had been a ground worker for the Nazi air force. He never had a gun in his hands before they pushed him into the front lines day before yesterday. They are doing the same thing with their labor troops and mess help."

"From a hill just a little while ago we saw a destroyer and some barges going southeast across Lake Bizerte," said Sergt. Fred Abben of Brooklyn, N. Y. "They are trying to get everything they can out of Bizerte before we take it."

At a command post only a few miles away, Lieut. Col. Theodore J. Conway of Presidio, Calif., said:

"Axis troops don't have a chance to keep us out of Bizerte—our chief worry is how to get in supplies over these hill trails. Our mule team is doing a good job where even Jeeps can't travel. We weren't a mountain unit when we got here but we are now."

Conway said the French troops along the Mediteranean flank were making good progress. "I saw Goums, native troops from Morocco, come down one of the hill trails herding 215 Italian prisoners," he said.

Eisenhower Quits OWI, Takes Post At Kansas State

Milton S. Eisenhower, associate director of OWI, announced his resignation yesterday to become president of Kansas State College.

Eisenhower, brother of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied commander in North Africa, said his new position would become effective July 1, although he will stay on with OWI until the first of September.

In accepting the resignation, OWI Dirrctor Elmer Davis said: "Mr. Eisenhower has been with this office from its beginning and did almost all the work of welding into one organization the four pre-existent agencies out of which OWI was made.

"He has performed great public service as associate director of OWI and I am confident that he will continue to do so in his new position."

Nazis Intensify Work on Forts In Norway

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, May 6 (Delayed).—The Germans are intensifying the work on Norwegian fortifications following a conference in Narvik at which the possibilities of invasion were discussed by Norwegian leaders and heads of the German army, navy and police, reliable reports from inside Norway said today.

These reports said orders have been given by the Norwegian underground to prepare for open revolt and that more snarls had developed in the total labor mobilization campaign.

On the southwest coast of Norway between Stavanger and Kristiansand, the Germans have begun digging a giant antitank ditch, it was reported. Work is being hurried on an airfield at Orlandet off Trondheim Fjord and a submarine station at Trondheim, it was said.

Other sections of the coast already have been fortified. Unconfirmed reports here said heavy units of the German fleet had moved from Trondheim to the area of Tromsoe, north of Narvik. While such a shift would put the fleet in a better position for action against any Murmansk-bound Allied convoys during the long summer days, reports of the move came following an increase in R. A. F. activity along the Norwegian coast.

Sources in contact with Oslo said the administration of the labor mobilization decree was in a "hopeless mess," with the Germans drawing vital workers from farming and timber areas for work on military fortifications.

Loyal Norwegians said a full-scale revolt would come when Norwegian officials gave the signal to cooperate with Allied summer offensive plans.

Gen. I. H. Edwards Named European Chief of Staff

London, May 7 (AP).—The appointment of Maj. Gen. Idwal Hubert Edwards, 48, as acting chief of staff in the European theater of operations was announced today by the U. S. Army.

The original announcement from headquarters said General Edwards had been made chief of staff, but this was amended a few hours later to include the "acting" in his official title.

He succeeds Brig. Gen. Charles H. Barth, 39, who was killed last Monday in a plane accident in Iceland that also took the lives of Lieut. Gen. Frank M. Andrews and 12 others.

A native of Freedom, N. Y., General Edwards entered the Army in 1917, served in the Air Force in the Philippines in 1920, and later in the office of the chief of the Air Staff in Washington. In 1940 he was named commander of Randolph Field. Mrs. Edwards lives at Fort Myer, Va.

Raid Sent Dentist and Patient Into Foxhole on Guadalcanal

El Toro, Calif., May 7 (AP).—Memo to dentists who think they have troubles . . . Navy Lieut. John Stockton of Siloam Springs, Ark., just back from running a one-man dental clinic on Guadalcanal, talking:

"My office was in a tent, and I used a small generator for electric lighting effects. The equipment was of the regular field type with a pedal attachment, much like a sewing machine, which would have to be foot-pumped to keep the power flowing into my instruments.

"Sometimes a nearby explosion threw my pumping rhythm off a little."

Once while extracting a tooth, he and his patient were forced by bombing raid to seek the shelter of a foxhole. Afterward Stockton couldn't find his tent; a close hit had blown it away.

The dentist's drill? The boys, says Stockton, "didn't even mind it; it was sweet music after the heavy cannonading."

Just after pulling his twenty-eighth tooth, he contracted malaria and afterward returned to the Marine Corps air station here.

War's Toll in Reich

Bern, Switzerland, May 7 (AP).—The physical and mental strain of four years of war are cutting the efficiency of German workers so sharply that some Nazi industries have reverted to an eight-hour day, a Berlin dispatch reports. Many Germans have been working 12 to 14 hours, seven days a week.

Giraud Hails Joan of Arc in Tunis Victory

By the Associated Press

Algiers, May 7. — Gen. Henri Giraud isued an order of the day hailing the liberation of Tunis and Bizerte for "Joan of Arc Day" tomorrow, and declaring "forward to victory."

The order of the day to be relayed to the French troops in the field said:

"On Joan of Arc Day—May 8—Tunis has been liberated, Bizerte has been set free.

"Honor to the British Army, honor to the American Army, honor to you soldiers of France who fought without arms, without clothes, without boots, but who believed in victory and the vanquished.

"Thank you for what you have accomplished, for Tunisia, for France, for liberty.

"Thanks to you the French army has restored its position in the great sun of glory and will never more relinquish it.

"Forward to victory!"

General Mitchell Goes to War Front; Geiger Sent Here

Marine Corps Headquarters announced last night that Maj. Gen. Roy S. Geiger, commander of Marine aviation in the south Pacific, and Maj. Gen. Ralph J. Mitchell, director of Marine aviation with headquarters here, had exchanged positions.

Geiger, 57, whose home is Pensacola, Fla., has come here to become director of aviation for the entire Marine Corps, and Mitchell, 51, of New Britain, Conn. and Alexandria, has gone to the war front to take over Geiger's duties as commander of the First Marine Aircraft Wing.

Duke and Wallis Arrive in Miami

Miami, Fla., May 7 (AP).—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor arrived today from Nassau, where the duke serves as governor of the Bahamas, for a visit in the United States. They plan to go tomorrow to New York. The duke said he was making the trip to attend to business both for himself and for the Bahamas.

Tunis, Bizerte Not Important, Nazis Now Say

By the Associated Press

New York, May 7.—Shortly before the Allied announcement tonight of the capture of Bizerte and Tunis, the German D. N. B. agency said in dispatches to occupied Europe that Axis resistance was "unshaken" and that, anyway, those strategic ports were really not very important.

Extolling the "heroic resistance" of the German and Italian forces, D. N. B. said that the losses inflicted on the Allies would be a "burden" to them in the future. The agency then explained that "even the loss of this bridgehead will no longer be of any decisive significance."

The D. N. B. telegraphic-code transmissions were reported by the United States foreign broadcast intelligence service.

OPA's Right to Fix Safety Deposit Box Ceilings Upheld

The Office of Price Administration has a legal right to impose a price ceiling on the rental price of safety deposit boxes in banks, according to a decision rendered yesterday by the United States Emergency Court of Appeals here, a tribunal set up to settle complaints against the administrative branch of the OPA.

The appeal was made by the Lincoln Savings Bank of Brooklyn, N. Y., which termed the Price Control Act a "breath-taking legislative departure from our peacetime economic policy."

The court held that "the price charged for the rental of the complainant's safety deposit box facilities are within the class which the price administrator was authorized to subject to the terms of the Price Act."

Japs Report Prisoners' Treatment

By the Associated Press

The Berlin radio asserted yesterday that Vatican authorities have received Japanese assurances that Japan's war prisoners are receiving "satisfactory" treatment but also have been told that "the way of living by the Japanese people differs so greatly from that of western Europeans and this fact must be taken into consideration in judging the problem of the treatment of war prisoners in Japan."

Berlin broadcast a Rome dispatch which quoted the May issue of "Ecclesia," organ of the Vatican's information service for war prisoners, as saying assurances had been given Monsignor Paolo Marella, Apostolic delegate in Tokyo, by "Japanese quarters."

The reference to differences in the "way of living" presumably would refer to the fact that the Japanese diet, mostly fish, cold or pickled vegetables, rice and coarser grains, is not found palatable or sufficient wherever possible."

Several thousand American soldiers, taken in the Philippines, on Wake Island, in China and elsewhere are believed held by the Japanese, some in Formosa and others in the main islands.

Lewis Believed Brewing Strike

President Roosevelt was asked at his press conference:

"Are coal miners employes of the Government, and if so, can they strike against the Government?"

The President said that he would reply affirmatively to the first part of the question. On the second part, he commented that he had been in the Government a great many years and could not recollect any strike by Government employes against the Government.

He also stated that he had not heard of any plans to end Government operation of the mines prior to settlement of the dispute.

Lewis had agreed to a 15-day truce last Sunday in conference with Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, who became Government operator of the mines. After the conference, U. M. W. sources indicated that Lewis had agreed to the truce only after obtaining substantial concessions, but Ickes emphasized later that he had made no promises of any kind to Lewis.

The Pittsburgh strikers went out in protest against efforts of the corporation to levy a $5 fine against participants in last week's walkout, the Associated Press reported from Pittsburgh.

Contract Invoked

A spokesman for the company stated that it invoked a clause of the contract with the union calling for a $1 a day fine for miners participating in strikes which have not been authorized by the U. M. W. The fine was to have covered time lost when the men quit in advance of the May 1 expiration of their contract.

Busarello stated that the new walkout was unauthorized and said he had sent a number of union officials to the company's No. 4 mine at California, Pa., to "get the morning shift back into the pits."

The WLB hearing produced testimony from Charles O'Neill, representing the northern soft coal operators, that miners now receive an average daily wage of $8.38 and would receive $14.08 if all of Lewis' demands are granted. Because of Lewis' absence, panel hearings have been opened to the press.

O'Neill tangled briefly with Panel Chairman Morris L. Cooke by commenting that the Government would have to compensate the operators for any wage increase ordered by the WLB. O'Neill enumerated a number of points which he said OPA would have to consider in adjusting prices.

"If price fixing authorities must take these points into consideration," Cooke said, "it seems to me that the Government is making too comfortable a situation for the coal industry."

David B. Robertson, labor member of the panel, questioned O'Neill to determine whether recent production increases had resulted in any increase in productivity per man-day. O'Neill replied that he thought production was increased mainly because more days were worked.

Kill 1000 of Foe, Bag 77 Planes, Sink 7 Vessels

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), May 8. — A tremendous Soviet artillery and air barrage was reported early today to have knocked out another German defense line before Novorossisk in the Caucasus as the Russians killed nearly 1000 more Axis troops and shot down 27 enemy planes in the drive to the Black Sea.

In addition, a Moscow broadcast recorded by the Soviet monitor here, said Russian bombers attacking along the front had destroyed or damaged 350 German planes on Thursday at a cost of 24 Soviet aircraft.

Driving slowly through hilly terrain northeast of the Black Sea port of Novorossisk, Moscow dispatches said the Red army methodically destroyed German-Rumanian military units and cut many of the invaders' surviving land communications between Novorossisk and the Kuban River valley in the Taman Peninsula to the north.

The midnight bulletin said a coordinated artillery and air bombardment yesterday drove the Germans from another series of strongly fortified positions, and one Moscow broadcast said nine Axis counterattacks were smashed and more important hilltops seized.

7 Vessels Sunk

Another Moscow broadcast to the Red fleet said three transports totaling 13,000 tons, one 3000-ton tanker, three torpedo boats and two invasion barges had been sunk in the Black Sea by the fleet's air arm. This occurred during an attack on an enemy-occupied port, presumably Novorossisk, the announcement said.

The Russians were reported already to have isolated Axis forces in the north from those at Novorossisk, and the midnight communique said one Soviet unit killed 700 Germans yesterday.

Aside from the violent Caucasian struggle the communique disclosed an interesting development in a long dormant front—the Velikie Luki sector 270 miles west and slightly north of Moscow.

There the Russians were said to have seized several inhabited localities southwest of Velikie Luki in a drive which could be another effort to sever permanently the Vitebsk-Leningrad rail line which connects Axis troops in central and northern Russia.

Axis prisoners and material were captured in this thrust 125 miles northwest of Smolensk, the Axis central front anchor.

Other Russian units fighting west of Rostov along the Sea of Azov were said to have broken into a village. The Red troops in this area have been fighting on the outskirts of Taganrog, 40 miles west of Rostov.

Minor fighting again was reported near Kharkov in the Ukraine.

Finnish dispatches told of the growing striking power of the Red Air Force which Thursday night hit the Finnish port of Kotka every five minutes for more than an hour. The Helsinki dispatch said "Soviet air activity never has been so lively as now."

The Finnish press published reports that thousands of planes had been sent to Russia from the United States.

Yanks Fight Worst Amchitka Enemy—Mud

UNITED STATES SOLDIERS TOIL—Bending their backs and digging their toes into the ever present mud of Amchitka Island in the Aleutians, United States soldiers haul an antiaircraft gun into position to protect their unopposed occupation of the point only 63 miles from the Jap base at Kiska. Manpower has to do what tractors couldn't on this beachside hill

U. S. Troops Took Amchitka With Precision of Maneuver

By William L. Worden
Associated Press Staff Writer

Amchitka Air Base, Feb. 16 (Delayed).—On the ruins of an Aleut village, nestled between low hills on this island in the western Aleutians, the United States has established an air base only 70 miles (63 nautical miles) southeast of Japanese-held Kiska. It went into operation today despite eight raids by the enemy.

The island of Amchitka, buffeted by the severe storms of the fog-bound Aleutians, is only five miles wide yet its occupation is a logical step preparatory to any attempt to oust the enemy from much-bombed Kiska.

Only a dozen Russian orthodox crosses mark the site of the old village and its cemetery. Today these crosses stand amid anti-aircraft installations.

The island was occupied January 12. The United States troops moved in with all the precision of a war college demonstration. Guns, ammunition and food were brought ashore that first day, and these now have been augmented by supplies from ships lying in the harbor once used solely by fishing craft.

All during the occupation operation the island was shrouded in snow, riding before a Bearing Sea storm. Men worked unceasingly for 24 hours to unload their supplies, dig in, establish themselves and set up communications lines. The advantage of their Alaskan training was shown in the quickness with which they threw up their tents, installed stoves and moved in guns and supplies of fuel and ammunition.

Brig. Gen. Lloyd E. Jones of Columbia, S. C., commanded the occupation force, which met no opposition from the enemy. Maj. Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner, commander of the Alaska Defense Command, said the Japanese were caught completely unawares.

The eight Japanese bombings came later, but none of them was of great intensity. The largest bomb dropped could not have been more than a 500-pounder, and most of the projectiles were smaller. The raids were carried out by float planes (capable of alighting on water) and they were able to come here at all only because of the peculiar weather in this region, which forced our fighter patrols back to distant bases in late afternoon. The Japanese planes were able to fly over Amchitka after departure of the American patrols, since they had only a short distance to fly back to their Kiska base.

The last of the eight raids came only 18 hours before the landing of American fighting planes on the new flying field—and by the time they came in no trace was left of damage done by the enemy.

Now American planes can keep Kiska under almost continuance aerial observation and attack it without so much peril from the Aleutians weather with its frequent changes. And now the Japanese may no longer move eastward from Kiska without encountering strong American aerial and land opposition as well as our sea forces as soon as they leave Kiska Harbor.

Hitler Mourns Aloud at Lutze Funeral

By the Associated Press

Adolf Hitler, speaking at funeral services yesterday for Viktor Lutze, storm troop chief of staff who was fatally injured May 3 in a motor car accident near Potsdam, said the national socialist party's losses were particularly heavy in a war that had claimed many sacrifices of men, women and even children.

"It is particularly tragic for me to experience how almost every year one or other fighter or co-operator is becoming one of those who, according to the author of the national socialist revolutionary song, are marching with us in spirit," he said in a broadcast speech.

"We have achieved what he fought for—a Reich made secure against its enemies by its own strength and upheld by its own people," Hitler said.

Propaganda Minister Paul Goebbels, who also spoke at the services held in the Mosaic hall of the Reichschancellery, told the German people that Lutze's 18-year-old daughter also had died in the accident.

New U. S. Base Perils Kiska and Japan

and Flying Fortresses.

Paramushira, however, Japan's naval and air base located on the northernmost of the Japanese chain of islands, is 861 nautical miles due west of our new base, just within the range of our bombers.

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox declared the movement into Amchitka was "a part of our program of advances—of aggressive offensive war."

He declined to give any indication of what moves might follow. Asked whether the establishment of the advance American base "doomed the Japs on Kiska," Knox replied:

"Well, it brings us pretty close to them. It puts them right under our easy reach by air."

Establishment of an American base on Amchitka, only 15 minutes flight from Kiska, explains how we have been able to keep the enemy base there under steady attack the day the weather permitted for several weeks.

At the same time, the Navy announced that we have another air base on Adak Island in the Andreanof group of the Aleutians, 397 miles west of our base at Dutch Harbor and 159 miles east of Amchitka. Adak was occupied by American forces last fall, but the Navy then disclosed only that we had a base in the Andreanofs, without identifying the island.

Yesterday's Navy communique, announcing the establishment of the Amchitka base, said that the news had been withheld "until our positions on this island were fully consolidated."

Delayed news dispatches from correspondents on the island, released yesterday, indicated that a formidable garrison had established strong defenses. Eight Jap air raids were beaten off as far back as February 16.

Yesterday's communique also reported that Kiska had been bombed six times Monday by American planes from our Aleutian bases and that enemy-held Attu—233 nautical miles northwest of Amchitka—had received four air attacks that day.

Liberator heavy bombers, Mitchell medium bombers and Warhawk fighters scored hits on the main enemy camp at Kiska, the defenses at the mouth of Kiska Harbor, beach area, and at Gertrude Cove. A number of fires were started in the "beach section," presumably defense installations, and a building was destroyed at North Head.

A Jap plane was destroyed by Liberators, Mitchells and Lightning fighters at Attu. Hits were scored on the enemy base.

Baron, Aged 87, Named Divorce Corespondent

London, May 7 (AP)—Baron Grantley, 87, was cited as a corespondent in an undefended divorce suit entered in the docket of the divorce court yesterday and scheduled for a hearing during the current term.

The suit was listed as "Newman (formerly Newmann) vs. Newman" without the petitioner's full name or other details. Lord Grantley is twice a widower.

Relocation of Japs Urged

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday agreed to urge upon President Roosevelt the abolition of 10 Japanese relocation centers in Western States as essential to the well being of loyal inmates and to the safety of residents living in the neighborhood of the camps.

Shunning legislative action as too slow to meet what Military Affairs Subcommittee investigators pictured as a growing crisis in the centers, the committee decided that Mr. Roosevelt should put into effect the following recommendations by executive order:

1. That the Selective Service law be applied to Japanese-Americans just as it is applied to all other citizens of the United States.

2. That Japanese found to be disloyal be placed in internment camps and that final determination of loyalties should be made "at the earliest possible moment." This recommendation was calculated to meet objections of many legislators to the present practice of housing loyal and disloyal Japanese in the same center. Some members of Congress, including Senator Robertson (Republican) of Wyoming, have protested that the War Relocation Authority has "pampered" disloyal Japanese.

3. That loyal and able-bodied Japanese, not of military age, be allowed to go out to work, "under proper supervision and at the earliest possible time," to areas where they will be "accepted" and where Army and Navy authorities consider it "safe" for them to go.

Moscow Accuses Poles of Espionage

Russia Charges Polish Officials Of Having Worked With Nazi Elements

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, May 7.—Russia accused the Polish government-in-exile today of having acted "under the influence of pro-Hitler elements" and declared that some of its representatives now in London had conducted espionage in Russia.

In a 4000-word statement read to American and British correspondents here, and sent also to the Polish government in London, Andrei J. Vishinski, vice commissar for foreign affairs, declared as well that the Polish press and radio "continue to circulate numerous false statements concerning Soviet-Polish relations."

Asked specifically whether the recent Russian-Polish rupture was a break or merely a suspension in relations, he remarked obliquely that the Russian word for the situation was one of a fine shade of meaning, and to a question whether there was possibility of resumption of relations he responded:

"There is nothing in the world that cannot be changed."

Then, ending his press conference, he added:

"The Polish government is responsible for the rupture of relations and therefore it is for the Polish government to take concrete steps, and one cannot discuss the question in the abstract. How, when, and in what direction depends on concrete conditions."

(During the day President Roosevelt disclosed that Joseph E. Davies, former United States Ambassador to Russia, would go to Moscow with a personal letter from Mr. Roosevelt to Josef Stalin. Mr. Roosevelt was not communicative as to the nature of the letter. There had been speculation that the President might propose a meeting with Stalin; the President remarked to reporters in the course of his press conference that their guesses always had been wrong in the past.)

Vishinski in his statement and in supplementary declarations to the American and British press asserted that former Ambassador Stanislaw Kot himself (now serving with the Polish government in London) was one of those who had acknowledged being involved in espionage in Russia.

Others Deported

Others, accused and deported, he asserted, were General Volikovsky, chief of the Polish military mission; two first secretaries of the Polish embassy and other junior members of the embassy staff participated in criminal activities against the U. S. S. R. and were prosecuted under the criminal law," he added.

To an inquiry why the Poles would spy against Russia when Poland and Russia were bound against the Nazis, he replied:

"Nobody spies out of charity."

Vishinski's statement traced Russian-Polish relations in detail since the fall of Poland and declared the Poles to have acted in bad faith in every major phase of those relations.

First, he said, the Polish authorities had persistently hung back from sending their troops into action in Russia against the Nazis as promised, at the same time pressing the Soviet government for permission to enlarge the Polish army already on Soviet soil.

Then, he added, the Poles had pressed "unlawful claims to territories of the western Ukraine and western Byelo-Russia (White Russia.)"

The Soviet government, he asserted, had been at great pains to foster and aid Polish institutions designed to help the Poles in Russia, but local representatives of the Polish Embassy had used these activities to cloak espionage work.

Accord Hope Seen Fading

London, May 7 (AP).—Count Edward Raczynski, Polish ambassador to London, categorically denied today the Soviet charges against the Polish troops and embassy, and expressed doubt that they would "help produce the desired harmony."

Informed quarters believe this latest exchange indicates that the break between the Russians and Poles is as far from settlement as ever.

Raczynski gave this answer to the two main points of Vice Commissar Andrei J. Vishinski"s statement that the Poles had not sent their troops into the battle in Russia against the Germans, and that the Polish embassy in Moscow was guilty of espionage:

A reiteration of Polish claims that the Soviets failed to arm or feed the Polish army, and therefore it was unable to engage in operations.

A statement that allegations concerning Polish officials engaging in espionage for Germany are "so fantastic that I have no intention of answering."

Diplomatic circles viewed Vishinski's statement with dismay, and said they were now convinced there was little or no hope of an early reconciliation between the two governments.

Davies in Dark on Contents Of Roosevelt Note to Stalin

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt has written a confidential letter to Premier Josef Stalin of Russia, and has given Joseph E. Davies, former United States Ambassador to Russia, the mission of carrying it to Moscow.

In making this known yesterday at his press conference, Mr. Roosevelt parried all efforts by reporters to learn the contents of the letter. He said that even Davies did not know what it contained.

Gleefully, he said that there were only two persons who were in on the secret — himself and his personal secretary, Miss Grace Tully.

"Did you write it in English?" he was asked.

No, Irish, he said, and, leaning back in his chair, laughed heartily.

Wants Conference

It is no secret that President Roosevelt wants to get together with Premier Stalin for an across-the-table conference. He and Prime Minister Churchill invited Stalin to meet with them last winter at the time of the council of war at Casablanca. They even agreed to hold the conference nearer to Russia, at Khartoum, Egypt. However, the Russian leader pleaded at the time that he was too busy directing the Red Army in its winter offensive.

When it became known recently that Mr. Davies was going on another mission to Moscow, it was widely assumed that his journey would be in connection with a Roosevelt-Stalin get-together, the meeting to take place perhaps in the Alaska-Siberia region.

All this was in the minds of the reporters who gathered in front of President Roosevelt's desk yesterday.

Davies Doesn't Know

However, the President cautioned them against speculating on the nature of his letter to Premier Stalin, pointing out that Davies did not know what was in it, the reporters did not know, and that the guesses of reporters were mostly wrong, anyway.

The President said that Davies would leave almost immediately, that he would not be gone long and that he would come right back. He said he assumed that Davis would learn of the contents of the letter when he presented it to Stalin.

Litvinoff Sees Hull

Maxim Litvinoff, Russian Ambassador to the United States, called on Secretary Hull for a final talk yesterday before going to Moscow to report to his government. The announcement that he was going home was made recently shortly after the Soviet government broke off diplomatic relations with the Polish government-in-exile.

Ambassador Litvinoff told reporters at the State Department that he did not yet know the precise date of his departure, but expected it would be very soon. He said he looked forward to seeing Mr. Davies in Moscow.

Pilot Escapes Injury

Capt. Robert W. Springer, 25, assistant engineering officer at the Bolling Field subdepot, escaped injury yesterday afternoon when the pursuit ship he was piloting jammed its brakes in landing. The plane's propeller was dented in the forced landing.

Clark Gable Goes On First Air Raid

London, May 7 (AP).—Capt. Clark Gable went on his first raid in the Flying Fortress attack of May 4 on Antwerp and "enjoyed it and learned a lot," the Eighth Air Force today quoted him as saying.

Capt. Gable, former film star, flew as an observer on the Fortress "Eightball Second," which went through the raid without encountering enemy planes and sustained only two small flak holes.

The plane was piloted by Capt. William R. Calhoun, jr., of Birmingham, Ala. Gable, who qualified as air gunner before his recent arrival from the United States, did no shooting.

"Austrylia girls are very fine girls," says the sea-chanty, and any Pacific-bound warriors who wish verification are referred to The Post's day city editor, Joe Cloud. Joe was a freshman in a California high school when he decided to look into sea-chanties and Australia, promptly signing on a four-masted, fore and aft rigged schooner. After 89 days he staggered weakly ashore and it took him five years to get up enough courage to brave the voyage back. Those five years he spent adventuring all over Australia—enlisting in the Australian Imperial Forces at 17, later working on farms, docks, railroads, restaurants, sheep ranches. In one scrape he got knocked on the head and left for dead on a river bank. Finally Cloud tried the sea again, as a ship's steward, visiting Pago Pago, Honolulu and Panama. In 1921 he was back in America as cub reporter in Aberdeen, Wash., and, except for one year he spent traveling all over the United States, and two years in advertising, Cloud has been in newspaper work ever since. As reporter and as editor Joe has covered science, commerce, industry, crime, art, social welfare, and has interviewed such people as Andrew Mellon, Albert Einstein, Sir Norman Angell, Cecil B. DeMille, Yehudi Menuhin, Henri Matisse, Rosa Ponselle, Supreme Court Justice Roberts, Homer Saint-Gaudens. Joe Cloud is the kind of city editor who considers twelve exclusive stories in his own paper a matter of course, but one in the opposition a calamity. His personal file is crammed with letters of appreciation and praise; the one Cloud values most is a four-word comment from a city editor who was once his boss. It says simply, "A damned good newspaperman."

3 Safecrackers Given Long Prison Terms

Three Negro safecrackers were sentenced to long prison terms yesterday by Justice James W. Morris in District Court after they had previously pleaded guilty to numerous charges of housebreaking and larceny in which over $14,000, mostly in cash, was obtained by them.

Justice Morris, who termed their operations an organized effort to commit safecracking in a wholesale manner, sentenced James McCormick, 23, 1414 Fifth Street Northwest, to from 5 to 15 years; Ezell Jones, 24, 1012 Fourteenth Street Northwest, to from 3 to 9 years, and James W. Lewis, 1616 New Jersey Avenue Northwest, to from 16 months to 4 years.

Assistant United States Attorney Georg McNeil, who handled the prosecution, said that the trio's operations extended for about a year prior to March 13 when they broke into the Washington Housing Corporation, 931 H Street Northwest, and stole $1200 in jewelry and $200 in cash. Their biggest haul, McNeil said, was from James Callas & Bros., 527 Morse Street Northeast, where they looted a safe of $5971 November 7, 1942.

Another sizable haul was from a Chinese restaurant at 656 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast where they obtained $2807. The three men were arrested during the latter part of March. All have previous prison records.

Lifeguard Classes Start Here May 24

Anybody who has cherished a secret ambition to be a lifeguard—and who hasn't—can attain this distinction by undergoing a one-week course of instruction starting May 24 in the Takoma Swimming Pool, Fifth and Van Buren Streets Northwest.

Women are especially invited to participate in the instruction, provided they are over 21 years old, an age restriction not applying to male regisirants. The shortage of lifeguards, it was said, was so acute that 17-year-old high school boys are being recruited.

Graduates are virtually assured immediate placement at a salary of $100 a month in District and private pools, and at nearby beaches, according to John W. Gates, District Red Cross director of water safety training. Five district pools are expected to open about June 5.

Prospective enrollees must already have preliminary Red Cross training in the rudiments of water safety. Classes in this basic instruction are formed daily at the local Red Cross chapter, 3120 O Street Northwest, and also last one week.

"The breast-stroke, Australian crawl, trudgeon and backstroke will be mere bagetelles to graduates," he assured. "The appeal for registrants is a last-ditch measure to assure opening of the pools, and every person with swimming ability is asked to sign up."

Victory Babies Make First Bow in Post

Washington's first pair of Victory Babies, a 6-month-old girl and a 2½-month-old boy who haven't yet met their servicemen fathers, are Mildred Mars Tonahill and Jimmie Cornett, jr., respectively.

The youngsters were chosen this week by The Post from the first crop of letters describing Victory Families which have been separated by the war. Their stories and pictures, which will be published in tomorrow's Post, will be mailed to their fathers overseas as the first selections in a plan to tell fighting fathers of the babies they have never been able to see.

Mildred Mars is the daughter of Ensign J. H. Tonahill, with the Naval Reserve "somewhere in the Pacific," and Mrs. Tonahill of 204 West Walnut Street, Alexandria, Va., while Jimmie is the son of Sergt. James L. Cornett, with the Marines at Guadalcanal, and Mrs. Cornett of 4132 Georgia Avenue Northwest. Additional ones will be selected each week on the basis of letters received by The Post.

Letters about Victory Babies and their fathers must reach The Post by Wednesday for publication the following Sunday, and reproductions of the pictures and stories will be sent to fathers overseas at The Post's expense.

Communications should be addressed Victory Baby Editor, The Washington Post, City Room, Washington, D. C.

California Needs Representation In War Agencies, Hotchkis Says

California leads the Nation as a food producing State and in war contracts but it has only two representatives in Washington war agencies, Preston Hotchkis, president of the California State Chamber of Commerce, Indutsry and Agriculture, told a Post reporter yesterday.

In the Capital on a business trip from Los Angeles, Hotchkis explained that California produces 45 per cent of the country's fruits, vegetables and nuts; over 25 per cent of its airplanes, and almost 25 per cent of its cargo ships, thereby presenting problems that are typical of that State alone.

Furthermore, he said, California has suffered a manpower shortage that is more severe than that of any other locality and is attributed to three causes: the evacuation of Japanese from the Pacific Coast area after Pearl Harbor, the greatly increased demands for workers in war factories, and the drain caused by Selective Service.

The two men from California who now are in Washington are Ralph K. Davies, engaged in the oil program, and Jesse Tapp, assistant to Chester Davis in the Food Administration of the Department of Agriculture, Hotchkis declared.

"The people on the Pacific Coast, particularly in California, attribute the difficulties in their manpower problems directly to a lack of understanding of the situation peculiar to their own section, due to the absence of Californians in some key administrative posts in Washington," he said.

"In our State, for instance, an automobile is a workingman's necessity because of the vast distances that must be covered. The Office of Defense Transportation has done an excellent job in understanding California's difficulties along that line."

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING'S BASKET OF Hand-Picked Cottons

What do you look for when you pick out a cotton dress? There is more to it than meets the eye. The first requisite of a good cotton dress is washability. A cotton dress should be easy to iron, should have buttons and trimmings amenable to laundering. A cotton dress should be simple and cool. These clothes live up to their heritage of dependability and keep the family happy and crisp through humid days to come.

A. Two-piece suit dress of bird's eye pique with small ruffles of white, in pink, blue, yellow and aqua. Sizes 9 to 15 ..... $12.95

Senate Group For Ruml Plan In 'Principle'

General Counsel Randolph Paul, would put all the taxpayers on a pay-as-you-go basis July 1, if it is finally enacted.

It provides for a 20 per cent paycheck deduction beginning July 1 and would forgive 1942 income tax liabilities.

"This is the sensible approach to the problem," declared Senator Clark. "We will collect as much taxes as under the present system, and will get them quicker."

Chairman George explained the decision was based on the contingency that "adeuate antiwindfall provisions can be drafted."

"We hope to have a bill ready for Senate consideration Monday or Tuesday," the chairman said. "I will go along with a majority of the committee. I will not hold out for the House bill forgiving 75 per cent of the 1942 tax liability."

Service Exemptions Revised

The action came after Stam said the House bill put only those persons in the first surtax bracket on a current basis.

The Finance Committee agreed to revise exemptions to men in the armed services. Instead of the flat $3500 exemption regardless of dependency to service personnel approved by the House, the Senate bill will grant a flat $1500 exemption over and above personal exemptions.

Abatement of taxes for persons killed in action, the committee decided, would be limited to earned income and not that from investments and securities.

Brown Orders Rollback of Food Prices

Brown said the rollbacks announced last night would result in an average reduction of 3 cents a pound in the retail price of beef and veal. This reduction will be in addition to that scheduled to go into effect May 17, where specific dollar and cents prices for these foods will be in operation for the first time.

Pork prices, he said, would be cut about 4 cents a pound at retail, while butter will be reduced between 4 and 5 cents per pound and coffee by about 3 cents.

More Reductions Expected

Additional reductions can be expected soon, the OPA said, and in some instances the rollbacks applied to fresh vegetables will run to 25 per cent.

The Price Administrator said his plan for guaranteeing stabilization in the cost of living contained the following four points:

1. Specific dollar and cents food prices at retail levels. Fifty per cent of all dry groceries will have these prices announced tomorrow for 150 communities, including Washington.

2. The cutting back of prices which are out of line. "Aided by tighter enforcement," he said, "the price reductions announced today will go far toward returning prices to September 15 levels."

3. Strict enforcement of all OPA regulations, particularly those affecting the cost of living commodities. "Under the dollars-and-cents regulations the consumer now becomes a partner of the OPA in insuring that ceiling prices are strictly observed."

Simplified Regulations

4. Simplified regulations for the seller of food products. "Under OPA's present system not only will regulations be known to seller and buyer alike but the OPA is consolidating all important food regulations for the individual retail store into one basic measure."

The cost of living index prepared by the Bureau of Labor Statistics advanced 2.6 per cent from September 15 to February 15, which is the latest figure available. The March index, due out next week, is expected to reflect another increase.

While the whole cost of living had advanced about 23 per cent from 1939 to February of this year, the cost of food in the index had gone up 40 per cent during the same period.

Sub Skipper Gave His Life To Save Crew

custom and responsibilities of command, Gilmore had to be the last to seek safety in the hull's interior preliminary to a crash dive.

Just before it was his turn he was struck by the enemy fire. One or two men were still with him. They sought to get him, badly wounded as he was, out of the bridge and into the conning tower.

Gilmore realized that even a moment's delay might cost the lives of officers and men exposed topside. At worst the submarine itself might be fatally damaged. Decisively, he directed all hands to get below. It was an order. They had to go.

To the officer of the deck, the last man beside Gilmore remaining topside, the doomed skipper ordered:

"Take her down!"

Down she went—down to safety where the gunfire of the enemy ship could no longer reach her. Down to a point from which her executive officer, Lieut. Comdr. Arnold F. Schade, 31, of San Diego, Calif., could take stock and plot a course for home.

Somewhere in the waters above remained the bullet-torn body of the ship's heroic commander—mute evidence of an officer's determination to protect his men and save his ship at all costs.

The story as told in detail today by the Navy Department added another slogan to those born in other heroic incidents in the war to date—such gallant lines as that from Wake Island, "Send us more Japs;" or that from the pilot who blasted an enemy U-boat off the American coast, "Sighted sub; sank same."

Navy men here who had known Gilmore said he was a quiet, mild mannered man, likely to reach quick decisions without becoming upset by the circumstances which forced them. They conceived of Gilmore as giving his final order "Take her down" in a low, pain-racked voice.

Gilmore was on his fourth submarine patrol against enemy shipping when the incident occurred. Previously he had won the Navy Cross for a patrol during which he drove his sub into an enemy harbor, sank two 1700-ton Japanese destroyers at anchor, and damaged a third. Subsequently he won the gold star in lieu of a second Navy Cross by sinking a total of 25,936 tons of enemy merchant shipping.

Those successes had been announced in previous communiques and to them yesterday the Navy added three other ships. One was the rammed gunboat, which was listed only as "damaged and probably sunk," because nobody was around to see what finally happened to it. One medium cargo ship was listed as sunk, another as damaged. The two cargo ships had been torpedoed by Gilmore's submarine prior to his fight with the Japanese gunboat.

president of the company; Frank I. Schmeller, plant manager, and Edward A. Schmeller, chief metallurgist, James C. Hahn, plant superintendent; Otto M. St. John, service engineer; Robert W. Chrysler, chief of the final inspection department, and Benjamin Prudenza, foreman of the cleaning department and chief inspector of rough castings.

Seven counts of the indictment as announced by the Attorney General charge that the defendants "with reason to believe that their act might injure, interfere with and obstruct the United States and its associate nation Great Britain in preparing for and carrying on the war. . . . knowningly, willfully, unlawfully and feloniously" made and caused to be made the castings "in a defective manner."

"The indictment charges," Biddle said, "that in carrying out the conspiracy the defendants gave workers instructions as to the time of day when castings destined for Packard were to be welded (usually at night) and ordered the castings removed from the welding room when Packard officials visited the plant."

ness, the determination of a multitude among the files of all the Government agencies that they, too, have a high, inspired purpose to end for all time the fallacious and callous premise that freedom is not worth fighting for . . .

Highlighting a day dedicated to the patriotic endeavor of Federal employes a message will be read from President Roosevelt.

Drawn into the myriad plans and arrangements of the presentation which will be spearheaded by the roar of aircraft engines over Europe, North Africa or the South Seas, men and women high in the councils of the Government, the Army and Navy, will join with Federal workers and those in private pursuits to acknowledge the common purpose to which all are dedicated until the task is complete.

Gen. H. H. Arnold of the Army Air Force will accept the P-51 for the Army and Rear Adm. Ralph E. Davison, U. S. N., will accept the Navy's Vought Corsair. Both will speak briefly.

The two planes in all the panoply of war with the proud Government Girl insignia glistening on their fuselages will be drawn up where all the thousands may see them.

But a few days away from the assembly lines the Corsair and the Mustang already have taken on legendary qualities. Head of their class among all the fighting craft of the world, their log, victories and achievements have been promised by the War and Navy Departments to those who made their entities possbile.

Insignia Completed

Only yesterday, under the personal supervision of H. S. L. Velle, president of Le Velle & Co., assinged by the commanding general of the Air Transport Command and the Air Service Command to instruct crews in the new process of marking aircraft, the Government Girl insignia was finished.

Following closely the original design of red, white and blue markings—a white American eagle carrying bombs, with a typical Government Girl astride its back, her hand raised in the sign of victory, is inclosed in a red circle around which appears the words "Government Girl."

The method used in placing the designs on the warcraft is called military decalcomania, Mr. Le Velle explained. Each design was transferred in a few minutes, while the former method took 27 work hours each.

Donald S. Dawson, special committee chairman of the Council of Personal Administration and Personnel Director of the RFC, will be master of ceremonies.

Promptly at 3 p. m. he will open the exercises with a short speech of welcome and explanation.

Music by Two Bands

Preceding the assembly for the christening, the crack 80-piece Army Air Force Band from Bolling Field, under the leadership of Capt. Alf Freeburg, and a 50-piece blue-jacket band from the United States Navy School of Music at Anacostia under direction of Bandmaster Herbert E. Weber, will play a concert.

Drawn up on either side of the fighter planes and the grandstand on the Ellipse, south of the White House, the bands will furnish music for the occasion throughout the ceremony.

All guards of honor in the first activity of the dedication will assemble at 10 a. m. Sunday on the Ellipse for fiinal instruction and rehearsal.

"This is particularly important," Chairman Dawson explained, "because it is necessary that all phases of the christening exercises move off quickly and on time."

The warplane sponsors too—Irene Lefcheck for the Army and Edith Disney for the Navy—will be present, as will others officiating in the program.

Entrance to the Ellipse for the ceremony will be on Constitution Avenue at Fifteenth and Sixteenth Streets, it was announced by Capt. Jerry Lawler of the National Park Service.

The E Street entrance will not be open for traffic and will be blocked off, he said.

Following the opening by Donald Dawson over the public address system, Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Washington Post, will speak briefly and introduce Jerry Kluttz, Washington Post columnist, who instituted the Government Girl Campaign.

Klutz will introduce Miss Agnes Richardy, whose letter to the columnist set the wheel rolling which grew to almost unbelievable proportions. Kluttz will tender Miss Richardy the two checks for the Mustang and the Corsair from the Treasury Department. She in turn will respond briefly.

Miss Richardy will present the checks to Capt. Ted Lawson, one of the Tokyo raiders with General Doolittle, for the Army, and to Lieut. Comdr. Leroy Simpler, for the Navy.

Both Captain Lawson and Lieutenant Commander Simpler, both heroes of the present conflict, will speak.

The master of ceremonies then will introduce Lucille Foster McMillin, widow of a former governor of Tennessee—Benton McMillin. She is a United States Civil Service Commissioner, having been appointed 10 years ago. She will present the planes to the Army and the Navy.

Acceptance Ceremony

General Arnold, Air Force Chief, then will accept the Mustang for the United States Army.

Accompanying General Arnold will be his executive, Col. Horace W. Shellmire, who entered the first officers school at Plattsburg in 1916, served in France during World War I as a field artillery officer and whose activities in the present conflict embrace every fighting front.

Following General Arnold, Rear Admiral Ralph E. Davison will accept the Corsair fighter for the Navy.

And following the acceptance speeches, while the bands play, the Guards of Honor will gather about the planes respectively while they are being christened.

A reception is planned for the Honor Guard after the ceremony.

Tokyo Raider To Attend Fete

Capt. Ted W. Lawson of the famed Tokyo raiders, who has said he'd like to "go out and get revenge" for his murdered comrades, will be one of the major participants in the dedication tomorrow of the Government Girl warplanes which will help make that "revenge" possible.

Lawson, who lost his leg in the assault of a year ago, was sent to Walter Reed Hospital last summer with injuries suffered in crash landing and now resides with his family at 4424 Fourteenth Street Northwest.

On his uniform he wears the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Purple Heart. In his heart he carries a segment of the story that the country waited a year to hear.

It was Lawson who returned to Japan two medals presented back in 1908 by the Emperor of Japan to a pair of United States seamen with the battlefleet visiting the country then. After Pearl Harbor the two seamen sent the medals to Secretary Knox of the Navy with a request that they be delivered back to Japan attached to a bomb. And Lawson accomplished the mission "with appropriate ceremony" April a year ago.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

A. A. F. Commander in England Ready to Hit Hard

(The Brass Ring and a free ride in the Washington Merry-Go-Round is awarded today to Gen. Ira Eaker, the man who holds the short cut to victory—bombing the heart of Hitlerdom.)

BEFORE the summer is over, Adolf Hitler will know that he has a tough poker player to deal with. This is more than a figure of speech. Maj. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, commanding general of the Eighth U. S. Air Force, in England, is not only a top-fighting flyer, but also the best poker player in the Air Corps.

He knows when to fold a bad hand, and when to stay in to the finish. This summer, with more air power than any other American officer ever commanded at any time or place, Gen. Eaker will stay into the finish. And he firmly believes that the blow he intends to deal will be decisive.

For months he has been fighting for more equipment, and now he is ready to fight with it. Until now he has had so few bombers that the number has been a strict military secret. But beginning now, he is getting so many bombers that it's much more of a secret.

There is a lot of guesswork about where the Allies will stage an invasion of the continent—and when. But there is no guesswork about General Eaker's invasion. He has finished with experiments, and is ready to supplement the R. A. F. raids by putting great formations of American bombers in the air, three, four and five times a week. He is prepared to carry such destruction to factories and rail lines on the Continent that Hitler's troops cannot move from one place to another.

Air Experiments Finished

Eaker says that the Vegasack raid pulled the trigger. That was the end of experiments. It's now clear that the American method of daylight high-altitude precision bombing is a success. The case is proved, and from this point forward the method will be applied with the skill and ruthlessness which Eaker himself personifies.

Eaker is one of the most offensive-minded men in the Army. He would rather use his last plane and his last pilot in attack than to resort to safer tactics of defense.

One day last winter he received a message from Washington asking if he wanted anti-aircraft equipment to defend his airdromes in England. His reply was: "Use that shipping space to send me more stuff and more men to fight with."

He runs the U. S. air show from England with the same offensive tactics he uses in his poker game. He is rough. In prewar days, Jack Garner, champion poker player of Washington, learned those tactics, to his sorrow. And more recently, Lieut. Gen. Carl Spaatz has learned some of Eaker's poker. There is no penny-ante about it.

Eaker has his enemies in the Air Corps, largely because he has passed them by. Or perhaps because he has broken them. Once he discharged a fighter pilot from the service for failure to open his canopy in a forced landing.

No Popular Idol

Eaker is indifferent to popularity. In fact, he distrusts officers who are conspicuously popular, fearing they will dictate fighting policy according to humane considerations. Eaker's policy is relentless; it may be hard on his men, and most of them think he is tough, but it's harder on Hitler.

Eaker had hoped to get a fighter command, but in January, 1942, Gen. H. H. (Hap) Arnold called him into the office and offered him the bomber command. Eaker replied, "But I have been a fighter pilot all my life!" To which Arnold replied, "This bomber command needs some fighter spirit in it."

He arrived in England February 20, 1942. Since then he has never had a day off, and he has worked under constant pressure with an average of five and six hours sleep a night. He has laid out the elaborate plans for the Eighth Bomber Command, which is now assuming large proportions.

For all his poker playing, however, Eaker is no gambler. He plays his hunches less than his wits.

Studied Journalism

He has sharpened his wits in many a school. When assigned to foreign service in the Philippines, he found time to attend the University Law School. When transferred to Mitchel Field, he managed to squeez in a business course at Columbia University. When he became a squadron commander, then a group commander, at March Field, Calif., he was not only a very active pilot who could outfly and outshoot the younger men under him, but also he took a course in journalism at U. C. L. A.

Gen. "Hap" Arnold put those wits into play when he made Eaker his executive in the office of the Chief of Air Corps. Thus Eaker was "in the engine room" of the big expansion program. Arnold now admits privately he couldn't have done the job without Eaker.

In England, though forced to be an administrator most of the time, Eaker couldn't resist the temptation to go along on the first big American raid last August 17. His group came back without losing a single plane.

On this flight, he conceived a tricky device to avoid German fighters. He sent out a couple of decoys which threw the Germans off in a direction far removed from the prihcipal flight. The decoys flew back and forth across the Channel, confusing the German radio detectors, while the main formation of bombers, taking another course, got all the way to their target without meeting a single fighter plane. It was not until returning to England that they encountered "the Jerry."

When Eaker climbed out of his plane, newsmen said, "Did you lead the flight, General?" "No," he said, "I merely went along as an observer."

But newspapers described him as having led the flight, and many a rival officer, reading the story, accused Eaker of being a publicity hound.

With Lighted Cigar

EAKER believes that every Air Corps officer should keep fit for flying. In England he suggested that officers quit work at 5 p. m. and take exercise before dinner. But only one or two showed up for exercise, so Eaker demanded 100 per cent attendance, on penalty of having to run down a steep hill and dash into a cold creek at 6 o'clock in the morning.

His own favorite sport is volley ball, which he plays with a lighted cigar in his mouth. The principal aim of his opponents is not to throw a ball he cannot catch, but to throw a ball which will smash that cigar against his face. They boast of having succeeded more than once. Rumor has it that the general sleeps with a lighted cigar in his mouth all night, but the Eighth Air Force admits that the report cannot be proved.

From the first day he arrived in London, Eaker has been fighting for more equipment, but until the last few weeks he didn't get the results he wanted. Though a large American force was accumulated in England last summer, a considerable number of planes went to North Africa for the invasion.

In the pulling and hauling over who needs bombers most—MacArthur, Chennault or Eaker—MacArthur exerted pressure in the press, but Eaker confined his pressure to the Pentagon Building. Finally he got results. In other words, as Eaker puts it, the staff is sending the big stuff where the big enemy is.

There is nobody in Washington, London or Berlin who doubts that Ira Eaker will know what to do with it.

5 Face U. S. Trial On Charges of Harboring Fugitive

Pittsburgh, May 7 (AP).—Five persons including two women, charged with harboring a fugitive indicted for criminal sedition, will go on trial May 26 in Federal Court here, United States Attorney Charles F. Uhl announced.

The five were reindicted by the May grand jury Wednesday under the general harboring statute.

Accused are Adelaide Marion Pelley of Noblesville, Ind., daughter of William Dudley Pelley, convicted Silver Shirt leader; Marguerite Marie Carmichael, alias Mrs. C. E. Sutherland, of Noblesville, formerly secretary to Pelley; Victor Warren Hoye of New Castle, Pa.; Frank W. Mariner of Poland, Ohio, and Henry Herman Meine of New Galilee, Pa.

Those B Cards

There is only one way of putting a stop to pleasure driving—that is, to ration gasoline much more strictly than at present. Putting motorists on their honor not to use their cars for nonessential purposes has been tried, abandoned and tried again, but without success. The evidence of our eyes substantiates the proof afforded by rapidly diminishing gasoline supplies that pleasure driving is on the increase these enticing spring days.

Experience with mandatory bans on pleasure driving was as unsatisfactory as the honor system. Enforcement efforts were erratic and ineffective, and at the same time productive of a maximum amount of public irritation. When Administrator Brown lifted the ban on pleasure driving last March, after cutting gas rations for A-card-holders to a bare minimum, it was hoped that a solution for the pleasure riding problem had been found. Unfortunately the holders of B and C cards still have gasoline to squander on nonessential driving. So the OPA has decided to restore its mandatory ban on pleasure driving in case of these motorists. It is safe to predict that the program will again fail, because the objections to the system are fundamental, though the enforcement task is not as formidable as it was when applied to all motorists. Moreover, while Mr. Brown says there will be no irritating snooping or stoppage of motorists for questioning on highways, there is bound to be a lot of irritating spying on motorists' movements and interrogation in private of the unlucky ones who attract official attention.

As The Post has stated repeatedly, pleasure driving cannot be eliminated by sumptuary regulations of the OPA type. The prevalence of pleasure driving is the result of overliberality in allotting gas to individuals who provide insufficient proof of necessity. Abuse of privileges by holders of B and C cards simply proves that a lot of people are getting more gas than they should have been allowed in the first place. Once gasoline is allotted to motorists, it is futile to try to control the uses to which it is put.

Weather And Food

In our anxiety over the effect of labor and farm machinery shortages on this year's food supplies, we are inclined to overlook one of the most important, if not the most important, determinant of output. That is the weather. Occasionally agricultural experts have issued mild warnings against counting too confidently on a continuance of the favorable conditions that in recent years have produced bumper crops. The warnings were necessary. Our good fortune has caused us to minimize the danger of a recurrence of losses from drouth or flood. Now the bad news coming from the weather front is a reinforcement of those warnings. It is a reminder that the food pinch during the coming months may prove to be a good deal more severe than official food planners have counted on.

The latest revised estimates of the Department of Agriculture indicate that the physical volume of food produced this year will slightly exceed the 1942 output. Even so, Government requirements for the armed forces and for lease-lend purposes are expected to increase, with the result that estimates of per capita consumption for the civilian population have been reduced somewhat below the 1942 figure. But if the unfavorable weather conditions that have already caused crop deterioration in the Southwest should continue, the food problem will inevitably become more serious than it now appears to be. It is, of course, much too soon to begin voicing alarmist predictions about the outlook, since the weather is not only unpredictable but has a way of changing suddenly and confounding the prophets of disaster. Nevertheless civilians must be prepared to make heavier sacrifices if nature proves unpropitious.

Last year we were extraordinarily favored, as shown by the fact that the volume of farm products marketed in 1942 far surpassed all previous totals. They were 28 per cent above the level of the five-year average 1935-39, according to indices prepared jointly by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics and the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. That record is quite a contrast to the figure for 1935, when marketings amounted to only 88 per cent of the base average, owing to the drought of the preceding year. Last year, moreover, record grain crops (food and feed) resulted in the heaviest grain marketings in the 13 years covered by the official indices. In face of this record-breaking showing, it would not be at all surprising if present estimates of the amount of food available for civilian consumption in 1943 proved to be too high.

We learned by hard experience during the depression years that the number of acres planted to crops did not provide a reliable measure of the amounts produced. The yield per acre is determined by various incalculable factors, such as the intensity of cultivation and, above all, changing weather conditions. What was true in peacetime when efforts were directed toward cutting down production is just as true in wartime when the aim is to increase production.

Stalin's Letter

The more immediate political implications of Joseph Stalin's letter to Mr. Ralph Parker, Moscow correspondent of The New York Times, have already been discussed. What has not been discussed is the way in which the Soviet Premier pointedly ignored all the usual diplomatic channels and, through Mr. Parker, said what he had to say about the Russian view of the postwar status of Poland directly to the American people and incidentally to the world.

Stalin, of course, has good reason to distrust the usual techniques of diplomacy. So have we all in view of the diplomatic history of the past two decades and its consequences. This device of making newspapermen the vehicle for highly important statements of foreign policy is something new in international relationships, but we may expect to see more of it. Of course, Stalin is not the innovator of this method, though as far as we know he is the first head of a state to employ it. Not very long ago our Ambassador to Moscow, Admiral Standley, unable to gain his point with the Russian bureaucrats, gave his story to the American correspondents in Moscow. The result was almost instantaneous. Admiral Standley got everything he had asked for. Doubtless this episode made a great impression at the Kremlin and elsewhere. Not very long ago Admiral Robert, dictator of Martinique and Guadeloupe, having at last played out his rope with the State Department, submitted his case—such as it is—to the American people by means of a letter to the Associated Press.

Do these developments indicate the advent of a new kind of diplomacy in which all the cards will be put down face upward as soon as they are dealt? Are we really working around, some 25 years late, to a business of "open covenants openly arrived at"? We hope so. But perhaps it would not be impertinent to suggest that this game can be played successfully only where a free press exists.

Draft And OWI

Elmer Davis made a frank and persuasive defense of his agency's draft deferment policies when he appeared before a House Military Subcommittee the other day. He gave the committee members a breakdown showing the draft status of OWI male employes of military age. Without such a breakdown, as The Post has previously pointed out, any accusation of draft evasion based merely on the over-all number of men between 18 and 38 years of age is disingenuous and unjust.

Approximately one-fourth of OWI's employes are men of military age. This does not seem an unduly high proportion; indeed, according to Congressman Costello's committee which has been investigating draft deferments, the average for all Government agencies is 37 per cent. More than half the men in this group, Mr. Davis testified, have dependents; there is no particular reason why they should have been drafted before the present time, since the induction of married men has only recently gotten under way.

The chief complaint lodged against OWI in connection with the draft appears to be that of the 155 men it has sent overseas, 108 are of military age. These men are in posts of immediate or at least potential danger. A number of them are in North Africa, where the climate and living conditions impose real hardships. Moreover, their jobs, for the most part, require special skills and training. It is absurd to think that their places can be taken by women or older men. And it is manifestly unfair to call these people draft dodgers. They are serving their country and risking their lives quite as genuinely as any men in uniform.

The appellation "draft dodger" has been bandied about so carelessly in regard to young men employed in the Government that many of the ablest of them are transferring from civilian to military jobs as a simple protection for their reputations. It is not necessarily true that a young man can serve his country more effectively in uniform than in civilian clothing. There is no doubt that men of draft age should be replaced and released for service in the Army and Navy in accordance with orderly Selective Service procedures whenever their jobs can be taken over by women or older men without injury to the essential work of civilian agencies. But those who remain should be protected from careless or malicious mud-slinging.

Secretary Ickes not long ago courageously admitted that he had been too lax in permitting employes of his department to enter the armed forces. His was a confession which the heads of other agencies should take to heart. It is rather curious that Elmer Davis pointed with apparent pride to the fact that out of his 1040 male employes of draft age he has asked for deferments for only 58. If he considers no more than this handful essential to the effective operation of OWI, then his agency must be grossly overstaffed. Mr. Davis should either cut his payroll or show less timidity in defending the usefulness of those who are on it.

Triumph At Last

The fall of Bizerte and Tunis, the last remaining points of vantage held by the Axis in North Africa, is a tremendous and gratifying victory for the Allies, a body blow to the Axis.

Since last Tuesday, when American troops entered Mateur, the situation in Tunisia has changed with great rapidity. Up to that time the general assumption was that the Allies would have to fight for every inch of ground, for every hilltop and valley. The American break-through at Mateur appears in retrospect to have demoralized the Axis forces. They made no effort to hold Mateur, but fled precipitantly to Bizerte. A short time after the capture of Mateur the Allied thrust in the direction of Tunis began to develop and has been crowned with equally startling success. In the meantime Allied air power has won complete and undisputed control of the air over Tunisia and the adjoining Sicilian Strait, a development that had spectacular consequences.

The most spectacular victory for the Allies since El Alamein and Stalingrad is at hand. It is unique as a truly Allied triumph. Americans, British and French, Greeks and New Zealanders and Palestinians—all have contributed to an effort that has proved to be as stirring as it was beautifully coordinated. There should be a celebration by official proclamation. If the Allies can fight and work together as they have fought together in the Tunisian campaign, there will be no reason to despair of the future.

Republican Step

In a speech to the House on Thursday, Albert Gore, the able young Congressman from the Fourth District of Tennessee, made a strong and cogent plea that partisanship be laid aside in matters relating to our foreign policy in general and trade agreements in particular. It is disturbing to discover that so far as the great majority of Republicans in Congress are concerned, this sensible suggestion appears to have little chance of acceptance.

Willingness to go along with a program of international cooperation after the war is evident among rank-and-file Republicans. Such a program has the wholehearted approval of such Republican leaders as Wendell L. Willkie, the party's standard-bearer in 1940; Gov. Harold Stassen of Minnesota, and the Republican Senators backing the Ball resolution. But there is no indication that this is equally true of all or even a majority of the Republicans in Congress. Their attitude toward international affairs seems to be predicated on the desirability of going back to practices which events have proved to be unwise. They still appear to be yearning for a return to "normalcy" and the halcyon days of the Hawley-Smoot tariff. If their patriotism cannot in the slightest be impugned, their judgment is certainly open to question.

We have ample evidence of this lack of judgment in the minority report on the trade agreements approved by the solid phalanx of Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee. Secretary Hull has said that the action of Congress on trade agreements is the acid test of our postwar intentions. We agree with the Secretary of State. If Congress agrees to extend the law, it will not necessarily mean that we are prepared to join in a system of collective security. But if Congress fails to approve the law, or passes it with a proviso calling for congressional review of every agreement, there cannot be the slightest doubt that this action will be regarded by all our Allies as a sign that we propose to revert to a system of economic nationalism.

The history of tariff making proves that they would be right. There can be no international policy under the old arrangement because the national interest would have to give way to local interests. Thus the corollary, whether the Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee mean it or not, is political isolationism. It is their attitude, not Secretary Hull's, which, to use their own language, is "not only unfortunate but imprudent."

TRAINING BASE

Gray morning slips along the sky,
And grayer still the beach absorbs the day
As something grayer laid on gray
Is mellowed but not lost.

And sea gulls wading ankle deep
Repeat in shifting patterns like the sand
Their graying flight against the land
And all things seen, not gray.

And farther on the walk begins
To stretch the island's length from end to end,
Rising rail high to comprehend
New cadences across its reach.

Cadences that rise and fall
Unlike the native beat of seasoned shore,
Rhythms that swell and echo war
Marshalled counter to wing and tide.

And night moves down on marching men,
And shadows cease as shadows do; and sound
Ascends as light fades into the ground
And soldiers beat their paces still.

Bolivia's Problem

BOLIVIA, spotlighted in the news this week by President Penaranda's visit here, is important in the war because it is the United Nations' only remaining major source of tin. It is important in the hemisphere picture not only because a significant attempt to ease the country's economic stress is under way there, but also because it is the first Latin-American country where the cooperative idea has been applied directly to the difficult business of labor relations.

This cooperation cut short a vicious propaganda attempt to conjure "Yankee imperialism" out of labor trouble that reached a climax there last December.

The facts behind the original trouble are these: Workers in the Patino-owned Catavi mines, producing for the British, last fall asked a 100 per cent wage raise. Their grounds were that the British had raised the prices in early 1942. In December negotiations broke down at the operators' offer of a 30 per cent raise, violence flared and the miners struck. This stopped tin production, as our coal troubles briefly stopped production here.

New Labor Laws

On December 8, just before the strike, Bolivia's Congress had passed an advanced labor code. Though not buying tin from the struck mine, the United States has contracts for Bolivian tin, antimony, lead and wolfram. U. S. Ambassador Pierre Boal, whose experience as counsellor of embassy at Mexico City during the worst capital-labor disputes there, give him a clear grasp of Latin-American labor problems, very properly asked the Bolivian government for an idea of how the new labor laws would affect the output of these badly needed metals. In no time at all, the rumor factories scrambled this into the Catavi strike and distorted the whole inquiry into an attempt to cram something down the Bolivian miners' throats. Nazi propaganda took it up and tried to make a hemisphere issue out of it.

The Bolivian government threw a monkey-wrench into this attempt by inviting United States experts down to help their own people study and report to them the facts of the labor situation.

The report of the joint commission, very recently made public in La Paz, recommends that the Bolivian government raise the minimum legal wage. But it goes on to point out that the government will also have to do something about education, housing, sanitation and health conditions if living standards are to be raised. It goes beyond this to a fundamental that applies to other Latin-American countries where there is labor unrest today.

"Prosperity for the workers is dependent upon the prosperity of Bolivia as a whole," says the report. "This in turn, depends on the development of a more secure base for Bolivian economy."

Bolivia's problem arises from the fact that the great majority of her people live on her Andean plateau, a region comparable to Tibet. Only two-tenths of 1 per cent of the total land area of the country is cultivated. It yields a bare subsistence to rural workers. Bolivia has a fertile eastern lowland, but it takes a month or more to make the trip overland to the plateau. The bulk of the food and cotton and wool used by Bolivia's town and mine population has to be imported.

Import Costs

Even in normal times, these imports cost high, but numerous pressures are forcing prices higher now. High employment as a result of the drive for war ores has increased demand. Overseas imports are cut down by the ship shortage. Overland imports from nearby countries are cut down by fuel shortages and rising demand within these countries. Last and very important, speculators are having a heyday with the goods that do move.

At Bolivia's invitation, United States experts are attempting to advise them on price control. But the war may last a long time and food and other supplies from the outside will diminish rather than increase.

The answer is, of course, for Bolivia to start producing as much of her own supplies as possible. The Bolivian Development Corp., for which the United States has lent partial financing and technical assistance, plans to stimulate oil, food and cattle production. United States engineers will soon leave to start building the all-important highway link between plateau and lowland. In northern Bolivia, where a rubber boom is on, we are already cooperating on health, food and sanitation projects.

These are steps, and very real ones, toward a way out for Bolivia. The country is important to the war and to the inter-American arc. Our efforts to help Bolivia help herself are enlightened self-interest, as is our cooperation elsewhere in Latin America. But the task is complex and will take time. As the joint report on labor conditions points out, anyone who promises simple or speedy solutions practices a cruel deception.

Germany And A Two-Front War

LESS THAN a year ago Germany's strength, relative to that of the Allies, was still sufficient to enable her to launch large-scale offensives in Russia and Africa at the same time, offensives which brought the Axis armies' almost within artillery range of Grozny and to the very gates of Alexandria.

Today the shoe is very definitely on the other foot. German resources are still very great. But they have been shrinking while Germany's needs have been growing. So the Wehrmacht is hard put to wage even defensive war successfully both in the Kuban and in Tunisia.

There is a strong possibility that in the face of the mounting pressure from the Red Army, the Nazis will be forced to relinquish their bridgehead in the Caucasus. Yesterday, with catastrophic suddenness, Bizerte and Tunis fell.

IN BOTH battle zones, though in varying degree, the Allies have dominated the air. The Luftwaffe's blanket no longer covers the German bed.

In Tunisia Allied air dominance became so complete as to demoralize the Axis and prevent it from carrying out even a small-scale Dunkerque. On Thursday alone 2000 Allied sorties were made over Axis lines. The Luftwaffe was almost entirely inactive.

This was partly, no doubt, due to the fact that Hitler dare not risk too much of his waning air strength in a venture whose days were numbered, even more to the circumstances that the Axis has lost almost all its airfields in Tunisia and was, therefore, forced to depend on the more remote bases in Sicily and Sardinia with all of the disadvantages that entailed.

In any case, the complete air domination which the Allies achieved in Tunisia hastened the inevitable end of the fighting in that theater.

THE AXIS debacle in Tunisia is certain to have wide-ranging repercussions, even though it has long been anticipated, both in Allied countries and in Axis lands.

It is an interesting fact, in that connection, that, given as German propaganda has often been to making extravagant predictions of future successes, at no time have Dr. Goebbels' minions suggested that the Tunisian campaign was anything more than a holding operation for the Axis.

Even Hitler has refrained from predicting that the Allies would be expelled from Africa. In his speech of November 8, a speech in which he again asserted that Stalingrad had been taken, he took account of Allied landings in North Africa only to declare that counterblows were being prepared.

Nonetheless, the final defeat of the Axis in Tunisia will be a body blow to the German and Italian people. The mere anticipation of it has already increased the state of jitters in the Reich, intensified the feeling of hopelessness in Italy and raised great expectations in Russia and in Occupied Europe.

To all of them the second front now appears to be just around the corner.

WE HAVE the assurance of Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information, that there will be "Allied operations on continental Europe this summer." And some days earlier Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States Fleet, declared that the U-boat menace would be under control within four to six months.

These two statements must be read together. For the opening of a second front in Europe would be an extremely risky venture unless and until we had overcome the U-boat menace, to some extent at least. On the other hand a real decline in Allied ship losses would automatically permit an expansion of our war effort overseas.

IN THE MEANTIME, certain of the benefits of a second front are already being enjoyed by the Allies even though no such front is yet in existence.

The point is that, more than ever, Hitler must reckon on the possibility of an Allied invasion of Europe and is, therefore, under the necessity of deploying his forces in such a way as to be prepared for it.

This would not matter if Germany's resources were unlimited, if she had enough troops, materiel and air power to take care of any and all contingencies that might arise in the east and the west and the south of Europe.

Actually, Germany's strength is far from being that adequate. That is why Hitler had to sacrifice a quarter of a million men in Tunisia in an effort to gain time to mobilize his strength in Russia. But despite that sacrifice, he has found it necessary, thus far, to remain on the defensive in Russia as well as in Tunisia. And if after losing Tunisia his submarine weapon is now blunted, as well, the jig will be up for him. We are on the eve of great events. The fall of Bizerte and Tunis is a foretaste of what before too long will happen on the continent of Europe.

Congress' Powers

In this fast-moving age Congress seems to have lost the power of initiative because it is too slow. Apparently there is no help for this under its present organization, wherein every single member is expected to take part in every bit of lawmaking of any nature, whether or not he understands it, or its importance to his constituents. Yet there is very real danger in the Congress allowing its powers to slip away for lack of time in which to attend its enormous tasks. The administrative branch, the bureaucracy (not at all in the derogatory sense), cannot possibly as nearly reflect the wishes of the people as can the legislative.

If the experts know best why should Congress not hire them, instead of the Administration? Their ideas would then be usable within the true meaning of representative government, and laws, not decrees, would govern the land. While public debate is the final arbiter of legislation (except bureaucratic), we well know that laws are often made by private arguments long before they reach the floor of Congress. So if Congress had the army of experts that the Administration has, and had faith in them, much of the time-consuming elements of legislating could be done away with. Congress either tries to do too much without help, or admits its inability to keep up by giving up. There is no reason why rules for administering laws could not be set up by the Congress itself, through its own advisers, and be just as workable. K. D.

We want to express our most sincere gratitude and thanks to your paper for the generous support and encouragement you have given to the Washington Youth War Savings Bond Savers. We feel that our success has been due to the fact that all our members sacrifice and pull together as a strong home-fighting corps to increase the sale of War Savings Bonds and Stamps. We are happy to feel that even if we are too young to fight we can make an important contribution to our ultimate victory.

We invite all the other youths who have not yet become brothers in bonds to join us. Let us all bond together not only to become a beneficial force here but to inspire the youth of other communities to do the same. JACK LIFSHITZ.

Land Of The Free

It seems remarkably strange that in this land of the free and home of the brave, Kent Cooper, general manager of the Associated Press, should feel alarm, and in an address to members of the Associated Press declare the necessity of being ever alert in guarding our constitutional right of the freedom of the press.

It seems all the more remarkably strange that President Roosevelt, who sounded the alarm in a do-or-die radio speech which was built around the four freedoms for which we were to fight to the last ditch to maintain, should be the disturbing element and cause of Mr. Cooper's speech, because Mr. Roosevelt's has purposed that no newspaper reporters shall be present at the forthcoming international food conference.

These freedoms, upon which our nation was builded, were very dear and precious to our founding fathers whose blood, sweat and tears made possible the building of our national structure. This heritage they left to us to guard and protect with our lives.

When the German people were denied the freedom of the press, that once great nation disintegrated. When the Italian people were denied the freedom of the press, that nation of song and story crumbled. The process came by slow degrees, until the people were so mesmerized they believed a Messiah had truly come to lead them out of chaos and black night into sweetness and light.

Instead they are now drinking wormwood and gall. Their husbands and sons have become cannon fodder; their daughters slaves of the government, and they are a people without hope.

What must it take to warn our people that they are drifting toward the rapids?

Our Potato

Now that potatoes are so scarce why should we not learn to eat properly those we have? The best part of a potato, especially a baked potato, is the skin. Moreover, the experts tell us that is where the most vitamins are to be found. It is enough to make one weep to see a person scoop out all the starchy and nearly tasteless interior of a potato and throw the best part away. With a little butter and salt they are a dish for the gods. Crackly as crisp bacon, tasty as the best efforts of a chef, they have an appeal all their own. Why not all of us get together and make one barrel as good as two?

The Once Over

Arlene Sees A Super Club

All-Out Arlene took a look-see at the Whitelaw Reid mansion, the superdooper service club of the WAACS, WAVES, Marines and SPARS in the New York area recently, and lost control of her superlatives. She will be all right, however, in a few days.

"Are the men in uniform going to be green-eyed!" she exclaimed. "There are service clubs and there are service clubs, but this one which we girls have grabbed off is out of this world. It's going to be awfully hard for us to keep our minds on the war once we have spent a few days in what used to be one of the most deep-dish private homes in America. It has walls and ceilings of Italian marble, here and there a ceiling of embossed leather, and—no fooling—a grand ballroom with walls of yellow brocade!

"It's a Global Martha Washington. I got a basic breakdown just trying to cover all the rooms in one day's march. You could put the Grand Central Terminal in it as a powder room.

"There is an iron lamp in the center of the grilled arch over the courtyard entrance that three girls could live in if they didn't want to cook. What I mean is it's stupendous. My boy friend just saw half of this Caviar Canteen before he complained 'Before we men soldiers can get a palace like this we gotta capture Venice.'

"It's the 10 best USO Clubs in America done in technicolar. What I mean is it's a colossal-plus.

"The grand ballroom is something to be seen by bicycle only if you want to cover the whole thing in a day and there is a banquet hall that a Hollywood director would hesitate to reproduce for fear he might be exaggerating. I used to see the building from the outside, and for years I thought it was an auxiliary building to be used in case the Fifth Avenue Library burned down.

"It was copied from a famous Italian palace, cost millions to build and was all done over once by Stanford White. Presidents, diplomats and royalty have dined and danced there. The grand ballroom—that's the one with the yellow brocade walls—has been turned into a dining room for us girls—with a dollar-top dinner. Fancy that! It used to cost a dollar for the tassels on the menu when Whitelaw Reid was alive.

"There's only one false touch. They have put Army double-decker bunks in all the third-floor bedrooms. Can you imagine an upper and lower sleeping system in the Whitelaw Reid mansion! Even the help had double beds of the canopy type, I hear. But—nobody's going to kick about that now.

Nazi Propaganda

I am an American of Polish descent. The news that 10,000 Poles have been slaughtered by the Russians would incense me as much as any other person—if I were sure it were true. But I am not. This tale has too much of the Goebbels touch. It is the purpose of the remarkable Nazi propaganda machine to split the United Nations apart. This is their opening wedge. I will not believe this tale until it is proved.

I know that the Russians have a history of cruelty toward Poles. My own family has suffered from it. But I will not allow this ancient hatred to blind me to the facts. The Nazis have everything to gain if this story is believed. Investigate it first. Demand unmistakable proof before you believe!

Do not allow Nazi propaganda to influence your feelings toward our Allies, or Deutschland uber Alles will be a fact, not a fantastic hope. IRENE JAWOROWSKY.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Clarifying The Alliance

ENOUGH has come through to the surface to indicate that the Russo-Polish affair is in strong and skillful hands. It is a most important affair. The relations between Poland and Russia can have consequences which will determine for good or evil not only the settlement in Europe and in the western world but the conduct and the ultimate shape of the war in the Pacific.

LIPPMANN

THE durability of the United Nations alliance depends upon clarifying the vital interests, the commitments, and the aims of the Allies. In the past few days there has been a substantial beginning. The Russians have let it be known that their relations with Poland are not broken but are only suspended. They have been told by London and Washington, and have agreed, that there must be no new Polish government-in-exile set up in Moscow to drive an ideological wedge into the Poles and into the United Nations.

On the other hand there is every reason to think that London and Washington have made much clearer and more definite than ever before just what are their commitments to Poland.

ON this crucial point there has been a very dangerous confusion since General Sikorski's visit to this country. The idea has been allowed to spread, without official denial and with much support from writers who try to reflect the official view, that the United States is committed by the Atlantic Charter, and by private assurances as well, to a guaranty of the restoration of the Polish frontier of 1939.

We now know that this is not, and never has been, the American or the British position. The formula used in Stalin's letter to the correspondent of the New York Times is the British-American formula—namely that out of the defeat of Hitler's Germany there must arise "a strong and independent Poland." The British have long since made it plain to the Poles that this, and not the territorial status quo ante, is what they are committed to. Though there has been some misunderstanding about it, this has also been the American position. Now it appears that Stalin too is convinced, and there is therefore a common formula.

THIS ends the dangerous situation where, on the issue of a highly debatable frontier, Poland would become the client of Britain and America against Russia. Such a relationship could only produce mischief—promising the Poles a kind of support we are not able to make good, encouraging them to be uncompromising on a matter that calls for compromise, and fixing it in the Russian mind that the western nations are her inveterate opponents. Now the point has been clarified. The Russo-Polish frontier is a question to be settled if possible by direct agreement between the two countries during the war; if not, then after the war by diplomacy in which we give no guaranties and make no commitments beyond those which always exist among allies—to use our good offices in a friendly and impartial spirit.

ON the basis of this fundamental agreement, Stalin's answer to the second question is far-reaching. He was asked, and judging by the language used he may have framed the question which he wished to answer, "on what fundaments" should postwar relations between Poland and Russia be based. His reply was to offer Poland a choice: just to live side by side or to make a specific alliance against Germany.

In making this choice the Poles will have to face a most momentous decision. They will have to decide whether to continue, as they have for centuries, to live between their two great neighbors, in hostile relations with both of them. This policy has meant that Poland was independent and free only as long as Germany and Russia were neither allies nor open enemies. Whenever they have become allies, Poland has been partitioned: when they have fought, Poland has been overrun.

The question, therefore, is whether Poland is going to try once again after this war to have a policy which is both anti-German and anti-Russian. If so, her prospects for the future are dismal. For Poland has no natural boundaries. Poland cannot be given adequate access to the sea without cutting through German territory and deeply antagonizing Germany. Poland cannot be given the eastern boundary she claims without antagonizing Russia. Poland is not strong enough to have two great enemies, and if Poland is to be strong and independent, she must begin by making an ally, instead of an enemy, of at least one of her great neighbors. Only if she does that, can she hope to have any security against the other. If Poland is to be safe against Germany, and is to get access to the sea which the Germans cannot close, then she must come to terms with Russia. For nothing can alter the fact that Poland and Russia are neighbors, and they must either be good neighbors or bad ones.

THERE is no use arguing that it is impossible for a smaller state to be the strong and independent neighbor of Soviet Russia. This is a counsel of despair in which those who adopt it make impossible that which they prejudge to be impossible. It is true that a smaller state cannot successfully practice the foreign policy of holding the balance of power between great states, and if by independence men mean that smaller states can do what even great states cannot do safely, then there is no hope.

But the example of Turkey shows that a smaller state can be the neighbor of Russia, can remain non-Communist in its internal affairs, and be strong and independent. Turkey was until a generation ago the sick man of Europe—over-extended, weak, without friends, the focus of the power politics of Europe. Today there is a smaller, more compact, internally reformed Turkey which will find her place easily and securely in the postwar world. Why must we assume that Poland cannot do what Turkey has done?

Byrnes May Lift Order

Unworkable, Says WLB

Labor sources reported yesterday that Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes is prepared to modify somewhat the "hold the line" order with respect to wages after the War Labor Board in a series of conferences with Byrnes made it clear that it believed the board could not continue to function under present regulations.

The modification said to be under consideration would take the form of a clarifying directive to the WLB authorizing it to make wage adjustments necessary to complete plant wage structure reclassifications and job evaluation studies. Under this plan, no amendment to the "hold the line" directive would be required.

Labor sources expressed the belief that a modification along the lines which would allow the board to adjust wages upward to "most commonly prevailing levels," would allow the board sufficient freedom to function as a "judicial," rather than an "administrative" body.

Order "Unworkable"

Public members of WLB were said to have told Byrnes yesterday at another of a continuing series of conferences that the board as set up—originally to handle labor disputes only—could not function as an administrative-type agency, applying inflexible wage yardsticks.

In a public statement, the board confirmed a report in yesterday's Post that it told Byrnes "that it is unanimous in its conviction that this executive order (the hold-the-line order) is unworkable without further clarification of points which are either not clearly covered or are not covered at all by the order."

Rumors to the effect that it was about to scrap its "Little Steel" wage yardstick were flatly denied by the WLB. President Roosevelt at his press conference also made clear that the Government has no plans to abandon the "Little Steel" formula.

In its statement, WLB expressed the belief "that these points can be clarified within the framework of a realistic and effective wage stabilization program which is in full harmony with the Administration's determination to roll back the cost of living."

Rollback of Prices

The statement also indorsed the Government's program to roll back prices as follows:

"The board is unanimous in its support of the current plans of the Administration to roll back food prices and other prices that critically affect the cost of living of the lower-income groups."

With respect to the "Little Steel" formula, the board recalled that the A. F. of L. members of the board had presented a motion to modify the yardstick on March 23, but that the motion was defeated.

"The board has not considered any change in the formula since that time and is not considering it now," the statement said.

Meanwhile, a group of C. I. O. officials and workers from New Jersey and some of their employers conferred with Board Chairman William H. Davis, OPA Administrator Prentiss M. Brown, and two of Byrnes' assistants.

The group reported assurances that the present restrictions on wage increases because of "inequalities" would be modified, along with an explanation of the Government's program to roll back the cost of living.

WLB members after their meeting with Byrnes cautioned that Byrnes had made no direct commitment to them, although they expressed confidence that he would ease up on present controls as they recommended.

Commenting on scarcely veiled labor threats to withdraw their representatives from the board, one public member said:

"You know, this board has had at least nine lives thus far, and I am sure that it will survive to have a tenth."

Swedish Poll Is 'Dud'

By Marquis W. Childs

Prime Minister Is Institution

Copyright, 1943, The Register and Tribune Syndicate.

(Third of Series)

Stockholm, May 7—Not long ago, in a public opinion poll here, people were asked to name their choice for prime minister should anything happen to Per Albin Hansson, who for 10 years has been head of the government. A large percentage of those replying had no choice.

This is a phenomenon common to democracies large and small. Roosevelt and Churchill so dominate their times that the process of democratic succession is obscured. Likewise, rotund, ruddy Per Albin has become an institution it is difficult to see around. While this may be temporary political myopia due to the crisis of war, it is nevertheless a kind of blindness that requires careful observation.

Per Albin, a bridge-player and bowler, has done extraordinarily well. Like the calm, peaceful face of the country itself, the storms of the past 10 years have left few marks on him. Nevertheless, the strain of maintaining a neutral position in recent years has told on Per Albin and the coalition government he heads.

Succession of Compromises

Inevitably it has meant a constant succession of compromises in order to preserve the delicate balance in the midst of war-torn Europe. What has made it more difficult is that concessions to Nazis, such as transit traffic of troops on leave, have been obvious, while repeated refusals of German requests have been undisclosed. They have been undisclosed because, while the Nazis might accept "No" as an answer, they would quickly resent any advertisement of that answer. Nazi prestige is carefully guarded.

Germans are repeatedly exerting pressure for credits from Sweden. A year ago, a German trade delegation arrived in Stockholm to arrange a new clearing credit of more than 50 million dollars. This was not only refused, but Germany was compelled to pay five million dollars in gold outside of the clearing agreement. To compensate, of course, the Nazis applied greater pressure to expand private export credits guaranteed by the government. Credits to Germany and Finland in 1942 were 75 million dollars, according to the best estimate of observers, and another 50 million dollars may be added because of the price differential. Of this total, perhaps 40 per cent was uncompensated.

While the fact that it is still in compromise is responsible for continued peace in Sweden, the compromise can become a dangerous one. The question is, whether it can be broken off when the moment comes for unequivocal action. Per Albin has spoken forcefully on this point, saying that Sweden is ready for any eventuality, with orders already given which cannot be altered by fifth column activity.

Atmosphere of Intrigue

That the government must function in an atmosphere of intrigue is inevitable because representatives of all belligerents are here in Stockholm after information and advantage. Utmost caution is necessary to preserve secrecy, and this goes for foreign legations as well as the government. One of the largest legations has a man who devotes most of his time to searching for dictaphones in legation offices, and in the homes of the legation staff. Conversations in public and on telephones are kept on an innocuous level.

In a coalition government there are disadvantages as well as advantages. One is the very lack of opposition and the lack of alternative to the coalition policy. Both in trade union and public elections, the Communist vote has risen. This does not mean an increase in the number of Communists in Sweden. It is a protest vote—protest against the cautious policy of the government.

The most striking recent example was the election in the Stockholm Metal Workers Union. Labor party members—Social Democrats—outvoted Communists by only a slight margin. This was a protest against the policies of a government long in power. Partly, of course, it was a protest against the fact that wages have not kept pace with the rise in prices, while at the same time skilled workers are so scarce they must be rationed by government decree.

Status Quo Mentality

The tendency of a government long in power is to freeze the status quo. Recently the Minister of Finance, Ernst Wigforss, introduced in Parliament a measure to restrict the number of tobacco shops to approximately the present total. Leaders of Sweden's famed cooperative movement see this as a symptom of a trend to keep economy within the present limits. The cautious government fears that the delicate economic balance will be upset.

The cooperators are still firm believers in competition in a relatively free economy. They have been so successful that their private competitors would like to curb them, using the war emergency as justification for freezing laws. Repeatedly, the cooperators have insisted that emergency restrictive laws should provide specific termination at the earliest possible date. They have looked with great suspicion on groups that speak of future "planning" which often seems to mean monopoly restriction and freezing of things as they are.

Too much importance should not be placed on the protests registered against the Government. The Communists have only three members out of 230 in the lower house of Parliament, and one out of 150 members in the upper house.

The Social-Democratic majority has steadily increased in the past decade, gaining at the expense of the liberal and conservative parties. The rank and file, and particularly workers in the party machine, share the caution of the government. They are still relatively prosperous with free trade unions, and they fear the upset of their precarious stability and a share in the desperate fate of labor in the rest of Europe. August Lindberg, head of the Swedish Federation of Labor, has taken a particularly cautious line. Gunnar Anderson, the vice chairman, has, however, favored a strong stand against transit traffic, arguing that Sweden's position in the postwar world requires an end of this concession to the Nazis.

According to Rickard Sterner, economist, the trade union federation cost of living has gone up 42 per cent since July, 1939, while money wages have gone up 24 per cent. He estimates that this is a decline in real wages of 13 to 14 per cent. That the decline has not been greater is due to the remarkable Swedish facility for organization, and to the far-sightedness of certain Swedish leaders.

Loan Feat Is Praised

Billions to Spare

By Cecil B. Dickson

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

President Roosevelt yesterday hailed the successful $18,300,000,000 Second War Loan drive as a "grand job" achieved by the American people and the Treasury. Oversubscriptions totaled $5300 million dollars.

More than 13 million dollars of the Treasury securities went to nonbanking investors, including three million dollars to individuals. The remainder went to insurance companies, trusts, estates and other fiduciary organizations.

This was five million dollars more than the eight million dollar goal set for nonbanking investors by Treasury Secretary Morgenthau as a part of the Government's anti-inflation program.

Banks Were Limited

Commercial banks, which oversubscribed issues alloted them by about 10 to 1, were allowed to take about five million dollars in securitites.

President Roosevelt said, with individuals oversubscribing their quota by a billion dollars, the voluntary system was working very well. It definitely decreased the need for enforced saving legislation by Congress, he explained, but did not decrease the need for new tax legislation to raise 16 billion dollars additional revenue.

Secretary Morgenthau, Treasury officials disclosed, is opposed to enforced savings legislation as long as individuals continue to respond to the voluntary sale of war bonds.

Mr. Roosevelt said the successful Second War Loan would mean that the third and fourth, scheduled this year to raise an additional 50 billion dollars through borrowing, could be delayed. The Third War Loan was scheduled for July or August, and now may be delayed to September or October, the Chief Executive said.

Fifty Million Purchasers

The President said the figures on the Second War Loan showed that 50 million of the 60 million Americans now working, including those in the armed services, have purchased at least one war bond.

He commended the American people for using their war earnings to save. Analyzing the figures, he said the sales of bonds indicated that 6500 million dollars represented individual savings. In addition to the three billion dollars purchased by individuals, 3500 million dollars were bought by insurance companies, which, he noted, act as the repository of savings of millions of people.

Mr. Roosevelt said in the last two years the "E" war savings bond sales alone to individuals amounted to more than 10 million dollars.

William M. Robbins, chairman of the War Finance Committee, said however, that out of the three billion dollars of sales to individual "only 1250 million dollars or 7 per cent of the total" in the Second War Loan, "represented the purchase of 'E' bonds, known as the people's bond."

Labor Lid Off In House

Strike Ban May Come During Truce

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

The Senate-passed Connally bill yesterday jerked the lid off a long list of dormant House labor legislation as the House Military Committee began a search for antistrike teeth far sharper than the original measure.

Enactment before the end of John L. Lewis' 15-day strike truce became a clear possibility as Chairman Andrew J. May called for committee action, without hearings, on Tuesday.

Word that U. M. W. District 5 had voted to strike if there is still no contract, and that a captive mine in the Pittsburgh area already had gone out, helped spur on the drive for quick passage. If the Connally bill becomes law, leaders of such a strike would face criminal penalties.

In a statement, Senator Tom Connally (Democrat) of Texas, pointed out that his bill "will apply to the present coal situation if enacted before the truce expires."

"It is of the highest importance that the House pass the bill promptly," said the Conally statement. "The bill ought to be on the books in anticipation of any future strikes in any war production plant. In announces a clear-cut policy of Congress. It gives vigor and vitality to the War Labor Board. It serves notice that strikes in war plants will not be tolerated. It ought to pass and it ought to pass now."

But a canvass of House Military Committee sentiment yesterday indicated Connally may not recognize his bill when it comes back from the House. The Connally measure applies only against strikes in Government-owned plants. A majority of the House committee apparently favor more general restrictions. Only two members of the present committee voted against the tougher Smith "cooling off" and general antistrike bill in December, 1941. Not only may parts of this measure be written into the Connally bill, but sections of other pending labor legislation may be added. These may include a prohibition against organization of foremen in war plants.

While the Smith bill passed the House by a nearly 2-to-1 vote, it was stopped short in the Senate Labor Committee and never reached the Senate. Sponsors have now seized on the Connally bill as a vehicle, and it is almost certain to go to a House test.

Organized labor, meanwhile, turned its guns on the Connally bill, in an effort to stop it in the House.

The Gallup Poll

Majority of Women in War Factories Want To Continue Working After Peace Comes

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., May 7.—The hundreds of thousands of American women who have hung up their aprons and donned overalls to work in war factories have done much to speed war production, but when peace comes these same women may well pose one of the most serious postwar economic problems before the country.

Will they want to continue working? If they do, will they be taking jobs away from regular civilian male workers as well as from homecoming soldiers? Widespread readjustments will be necessary in American life if large numbers of women stay out of the home and continue in the factory.

56 Per Cent Want to Continue

A survey among women war workers indicates that a rather high proportion of them—more than half—want to continue working after peace comes.

The survey included interviews with women workers in war plants in 64 cities located in 15 States. Each woman was asked:

"After the war do you plan to go on working?"

The results follow:

Yes	56%
No	31
Undecided	13

The survey found that inclination among women to go on working is closely connected with marital status. Twice as many single women as married women want to continue in jobs.

	Married Women	Single Women
Yes	35%	75%
No	49	14
Undecided	16	11

Many factors may, of course, arise to change the minds of the single women who want to work—proposals of marriage, family obligations, difficulty in finding other jobs, and the like. But it is significant that only about one single woman in seven is positive at this time that she will not want to go on working after the war.

Wage Problem

Postwar unemployment will depend on the total number of people in the country who want work. If there is a business collapse, it looks as if this total number will be greatly swollen by the large proportion of women in the labor market who, having had a taste of work during war, want to continue as wage earners.

Employers will inevitably be tempted to offer jobs to women at wages less than those paid to men. The women of the country are emphatic in the belief, however, that a woman should receive the same pay as a man for doing the same work. Eighty-five per cent of all women questioned in a survey a year ago expressed that view, and 71 per cent of all males agreed.

Quints in U. S. for Launchings

By the Associated Press

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., May 7.—Five of the world's most famous little girls, the Dionne quintuplets, came to the United States for the first time today.

En route to Superior, Wis., where they will launch five cargo ships Sunday in an elaborate ceremony, they pulled in this afternoon in a special railway car. They left their Callander (Ontario) home early this morning after spending the night aboard the car.

The famous sisters were tired when they reached the American side, for instead of sleeping as late as usual this morning, they were awakened by the motion of the train as it pulled out and were too excited to go back to sleep.

They made a brief appearance on the rear platform of the car—just long enough to wave greetings to about 1000 who crowded about the station to catch a glimpse of the 8-year-old daughters of Olivia and Elzire Dionne.

Earlier, at Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, before the train crossed the international bridge over the St. Mary's River to the American side, another crowd was on hand to greet the party. There five little girls of about their age went aboard the car to extend greetings and present the Dionnes with bouquets.

The occasion provided Mrs. Dionne with a birthday trip. She observed her thirty-fourth birthday today, and at North Bay, Ontario, Brig. Gen. Leo Milligan, Bishop of Pembroke, Ontario, boarded the train and said a special Mass.

With the sisters and parents, four other Dionne children made the trip.

Church Report Protests Jews' Persecution

"Christians Protest Persecution," a record of the protests by Christendom against the Nazi campaign to exterminate the Jews of Europe, was made public this week by the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Included in the report are denunciations—many of them circulated through underground channels—of leading Christian spokesmen in the occupied countries, in the Axis satellite countries and even in Germany and Italy. Also included are some of the known facts about the resultant mistreatment of the protesting churchmen by the Axis secret police and other official agencies.

Seen as Barometer

In an introduction to the report, Dr. Everett R. Clinchy, president of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, writes: "The treatment of the Jews, as of other minority groups, is the barometer of civilization. It devolves upon religiously motivated people, particularly, to take leadership in efforts to preserve life and human dignity. This is the time for religious people to act.

"Few people are aware," Dr. Clinchy points out, "of the great volume of protest made by the world's Christian leaders and ecclesiastical bodies against Nazi persecution of Jews and other subject peoples. So voluminous is this body of protest that only a sampling can be presented in this pamphlet. But even these excerpts testify to the profound awareness on the part of Christians that anti-Semitism is an attack not only against Jews, but against Judaism: not only against Judaism, but against the Christian Church which has extended world-wide the values of the Judaeo-Christian tradition; and not only against Judaism and Christianity, but against religion itself and against all of the law, the order, and the spirit of Western civilization.

Part of Nazi Strategy

"It is vitally important that our consciences not be dulled by oft-repeated accounts of persecution. It is the Nazi strategy to deaden moral sensitivities. Americans must give no assistance at that point. Our sensibilities must be kept alert, our consciences alive. This pamphlet has been prepared with that in mind.

"Protest, however, is not enough. Action, immediate and long-term, must follow, both for the sake of the innocent victims of brutality and for our own sakes so that we may not become cynical or apathetic. If action does not accompany our resentment, harm rather than good may result."

Proposals for action made by various groups on this tragic situation are summarized by Dr. Clinchy as follows:

(a) The United Nations should appeal to the German government through neutral nations to release the Jewish people from Nazi-dominated countries.

(b) The United Nations should provide refuge for victims of persecution with temporary asylum for the duration of the war. Immigration procedures should be facilitated within established quota limits.

Financial Assistance

(c) The neutral nations should be given financial assistance by the United Nations to provide sanctuary for refugees.

(d) Great Britain should continue and extend opportunity for immigration of Jews into Palestine.

(e) A system of minimum food rations for the victims of Nazi oppression who are unable to leave the Axis jurisdiction should be effected immediately.

The report lists the following as among the Christian church groups in the United States who have expressed their strong views on the un-Christian nature of the Nazi policies.

Prelate Protests—

Nazi Labor View Denied By Cardinal

(From United Nations' Information Service, 610 Fifth Avenue, New York City.)

Cardinal Lienart of Lille, France, whose name has been widely quoted by the Germans as a collaborator and supporter of forced labor, is the latest Catholic prelate to "protest with all my strength" against such misrepresentation.

He denounced the attempt to link the church and himself in the war against Russia and the propaganda which made him say that it was a duty to accept labor service, declaring: "No, for there are demands which exceed the limits of our just obligation. It is therefore not a sin to evade it."

This exposure of the way his words were "distorted and exploited by propaganda," following so closely upon the exposure of the German forged letter making the Belgian Cardinal Van Roey seem to support Germany, shows that the Nazis are undertaking a campaign of lies in order to create the impression that the Catholic Church is on their side.

Cardinal Van Roey's true opinion of German forced labor is contained in his pastoral letter of March 21, in which he declared that these measures are in flagrant contradiction to international law and to natural law; and that any collaboration in the executive of such measures is unacceptable to the conscience of any good Catholic.

Class Invites Congressmen

Senators and Representatives are invited to the A. B. Pugh Bible Class of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church tomorrow at 10 a. m. for Congressional Day service. Justice Bolitha J. Laws will speak on "Essentials of Christian Leadership," and a trio from the Cloister Choir will sing. Representatives George Mahon (Texas) and Brooks Hays (Arkansas) will lead the opening and closing prayers. Dan Dollarhide will preside. Seats will also be reserved in the church auditorium for those Congressmen who wish to attend either the 9:00 o'clock or the 11:00 o'clock church service.

Ex-Missionaries Preach Tomorrow

Two brothers who were formerly American missionaries in Japan will be the special preachers tomorrow at the Church of the Pilgrims, on the Parkway at the corner of Tewenty-second and P Streets Northwest.

The Rev. Boude C. Moore, former missionary of the Dutch Reformed Church, will preach at 11 a. m. on "Confidence."

The Rev. Lardner Moore, former missionary of the Presbyterian Church, preaches at 8 p. m., on "The Fruit of Missions."

Both brothers are now residents of Washington.

THEODULPH

All glory, laud and honor
To Thee, Redeemer, King,
To whom the lips of children
Made sweet hosannas ring.

This early Latin hymn was composed in 820 A.D. by Theodulph, Bishop of Orleans, while a king's prisoner in the cloister of Anjou. The Roman church canonized him and his hymn is still sung as a processional in Protestant as well as Catholic churches.

War Veterans To Be United Church Guests

Mother, "bravest soldier of them all," will be honored at hundreds of services tomorrow in churches where service flags bear stars for their sons in the armed forces.

PULASKI

United Spanish War Veterans and auxiliaries of the Department of the District of Columbia will be guests in the Mother's Day service of Memorial United Brethren Church, North Capitol and R Streets, at 8 p. m. The sermon, on the subject, "Christ Exalts Motherhood," will be preached by the Rev. Dr. Ira Sankey Ernst. Chaplain John A. Lund will assist the pastor in a memorial service in honor of departed mothers.

At the morning service the sermon will be on the subject "Motherhood's Challenge to the Church."

A tea in honor of mothers of servicemen will be given by the Christian Endeavor Society from 5 to 6:30 p. m. in the Sunday school room. Mothers of the 120 servicemen of the church will be special guests of honor and all mothers of the church are invited. Special Mother's Day features will be given in the Christian Endeavor service.

The Bradburn Memorial Methodist Church, 1341 K Street Southeast, will begin two weeks of evangelistic services tomorrow at 8 p. m.

Because many a mother's son will spend Sunday on foreign battlefields, it will be observed with special Mother's Day services with Maurice Pulaski of the Metropolitan Baptist Church as speaker for the occasion.

The Rev. J. S. Glascoe, pastor of the church, will speak on Monday evening.

Tuesday evening will be observed as "Youth Night," under auspices of the young people, with George Kendall as speaker.

The Wednesday evening service has been designated as "Sunday School Night," under the direction of the superintendent, Mrs. Helena Gruver, featuring Mrs. Virginia Knode of the Metropolitan Baptist Church as speaker.

The Rev. Weaver Doyle, pastor of the Landover Christian Church, will occupy the pulpit on Thursday and Friday evenings.

The children from the Baptist Children's Home in Bethesda will be special guests at the morning services at Petworth Baptist Church on Mother's Day, and they will also be entertained in the homes of church members for dinner. The Rev. James P. Rodgers, the pastor, has chosen as his Mother's Day sermon the following theme: "Families in War Time."

Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, will address Mother's Day services tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, discussing "The Home Front On Mother's Day." The Westminster youth group will sponsor a tea for mothers in the congregation from 4 to 6 p. m. Dr. Albert J. McCartney will preach at 11 a. m.

The Catholic Police and Firemen's Society of Washington will hold its annual Communion Mass at St. Patrick's Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest tomorrow at 8 a. m.

The Right Rev. Msgr. Patrick J. McCormick, rector of the Catholic University of America, will celebrate the mass and deliver the sermon. The members of both departments will assemble on Tenth and K Streets and, led by the Metropolitan Police Boys Band, will march to St. Patrick's Church.

Because of rationing, the breakfast which had been held in previous years at the Willard Hotel has been canceled.

Dr. Blackwelder to Preside At Annual Federation Session

Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, retiring president of the Washington Federation of Churches, will preside at the twenty-third Annual Meeting of the Federation in the Presidential Room of the Statler Hotel, Monday at 8 p. m.

At a brief business meeting at the opening of the program the Annual Award to an outstanding Christian layman will be presented by Canon Theodore Wedel, Chairman of the Award Committee, in behalf of the Federation of Churches.

New officers will be elected and installed.

The program of the evening will be featured by a panel discussion of the subject: "Is the Church Preparing for Tomorrow?" Dr. Roswell Barnes of New York City, author of "The Christian Imperative," will preside over the panel. Dr. Walter Judd, former medical missionary to China, and now Congressman from Minnesota; Mrs. J. B. Calkins, a member of the National Y. W. C. A. Board, and an outstanding Christian laywoman; Judge Bolitha Laws, who was one of the recipients of the annual award presented to outstanding Christian laymen by the Federation of Churches; and Dr. William Stuart Nelson, Dean of the School of Religion of Howard University, will constitute the panel.

Dr. Horace Cromer will present the report of the nominating committee. Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, president of the Council of Church Women, is chairman of the Committee on Reception and Fellowship Hour. The Committee on Arrangements for the Annual Meeting are: Mrs. Fred Buschmeyer, Mrs. Warren Hastings, Mr. Edwin Lewis, Dr. Stephen G. Spottswood, Rev. Francis McPeek, chairman, and Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, ex-officio.

Church to Dedicate Honor Roll

The Ninth Street Christian Church, Ninth and D Streets Northeast, of which the Rev. Carroll C. Roberts is minister, will dedicate its honor roll, containing 151 names of men and women from the church now serving in the armed forces, tomorrow at 11 a. m.

The plaque is the gift of the Woman's Council of the church and will be presented in the name of the mothers of Ninth Street Church. The minister will deliver the sermon, on "Youth Building the Home for Tomorrow."

The Rev. J. Virgil Lilly, pastor of the Rockville Christian Church, will speak at the evening service, using as his theme "Youth and Social Life for Tomorrow."

Plaque and Flag Service Planned

A special service has been planned for Mother's Day at the National City Christian Church. Dr. J. Warren Hastings will speak at 10:50 a. m. on "Mothers of Men," and will dedicate the bronze plaque containing the names of the members of this church who are now in service, and also the Service Flag which has been given to the church. These will be hung in the foyer of the church.

In keeping with the dedication, Chaplain S. Walter R. Zimmerman and W. H. McKinney will preside at the Communion table and servicemen will act as deacons at the rites.

Mrs. Pauline Holcomb, well known soprano, will sing "Mother o' Mine," by Tours, and the entire adult choir will sing "A Mother's Day Prayer," by Thompson.

The Rev. Ernest A. Yarrow, pastor at large for the Congregational churches of Washington, will conduct the service. The minister, Paul W. Yinger, granted a leave of absence from the church, left on Friday for the Army Chaplain's School at Harvard University.

Mr. Cockburn To Preach At Cathedral

The Rev. Harold A. Cockburn, British government liaison officer between Protestant churches of Great Britain and the United States, will preach tomorrow at 4 p. m. at the Washington Cathedral and at 11 a. m. at New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

One of the most popular preachers in his native country of Scotland, Mr. Cockburn is known and respected also as an amateur sportsman and a fighting man, having served through the First World War in the ranks of the Royal field artillery and in the present war as chaplain to the Royal air force. He is no stranger to the United States, for, previous to this visit, he studied at Union Theological Seminary in New York, where he received the degree of master of sacred theology.

Before coming to America to assume the work of liaison officer between British and American Protestant churches, Mr. Cockburn did much to help the Norwegians who managed to escape from their country to settle in Scotland, and was one of the founders of the Scottish-Norwegian Society.

Mrs. Charles Adams Becker of Arlington, Va., and mother of two Navy sons, will sing A. H. Boservig's "Ave Maria" at tomorrow's 12 o'clock mass at the St. Thomas More Catholic Church, Buckingham Village. She is a former soprano soloist in Baltimore Catholic choirs. Her sons are Lieuts. Charles H. and J. J. Becker.

The Rockville Volunteer Fire Department will attend Mother's Day services tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Rockville Christian Church, where the Rev. J. Virgil Lilly will preach.

Dr. Wesley M. Gewehr, professor of history at the University of Maryland, will speak May 14, at 8:30 p. m., at Christ Lutheran Church, Bethesda, on "What Are the Chances for a Lasting Peace?"

Bethesda Community services will be held tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Bethesda Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Raymond A. Vogeley, pastor of Christ Lutheran Church, will preach.

The Rev. Herbert Hoover Bear, since January 1, 1938, pastor of the Floris, Herndon, Ashburn and Navy (Va.) Presbyterian churches, has resigned to enter the Army chaplaincy service, and will leave this week for the Army chaplains training school at Harvard University. His wife and two children will remain at La Grange, Ga., during his absence.

Hawaii Held Ideal Field for Christian Work

Declaring that "the Hawaiian Island racial experiment is an outstanding success," a report presented to the National Council of the Protestant Church this week in New York said the islands "constitute one of the greatest opportunities for Christian work that has ever opened to the church."

The report, made by the Right Rev. Stephen E. Keeler, Bishop Coadjutor of Minnesota, who recently returned from a visit to the islands, was placed before the council by Presiding Bishop Henry St. George Tucker.

It said that on the islands "there is a mingling, socially, of every race, without friction, with complete understanding and sympathy; with no indication whatever of racial jealousy or antagonism."

The report said that schools formerly under the influence of Japanese have been closed by law, and Japanese-American students, once taught emperor worship and Japanese tradition, now were flocking to the church.

"From one island after another," Bishop Keeler reported, "come reports of many baptisms of teenage boys and girls of Japanese ancestry, and on his trip the bishop confirmed many."

He said Japanese-American boys were enlisting in the American Army in large numbers, and "are eager to prove their loyalty."

The churches "are performing a splendid service," Bishop Keeler reported, in ministry to American sailors and soldiers on the island, providing "activities looking for the welfare of the soldier and sailor, particularly the men on leave."

Maid Dearth Puzzles Writer Of Mysteries

Leslie Ford, who writes those smooth concoctions of murder-mystery and Capital intrigue, is back in Washington, smack up against a local situation which has more mystery than intrigue for her.

Miss Ford, privately the wife of Comdr. Ford K. Brown, U. S. N., just can't find a maid for the Georgetown house she came here to reopen.

So, temporarily "marooned" at the Mayflower Hotel, she is making plans for another of her well-known books with a Washington locale. Nothing more positive will happen until some local domestic relents and permits the author to reoccupy her home. Because Leslie Ford can write only in more or less complete seclusion. And the Mayflower is a busy place these days.

Miss Ford spent the past five weeks in Annapolis in order to be near her husband who is ill in the Naval Hospital there.

She wouldn't say what her latest book will be like, but thought she might get around to the actual writing in about a month.

If she follows her established formula of working in longhand, from 9 in the morning until 5 every afternoon, it probably won't be much beyond the end of June when her book is completed.

Ceiling Charges Against Grocer Ready for Action

Peoples Drug Sales Up 15% During April

By S. Oliver Goodman

Continuing a record-breaking pace, sales of the Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., soared 14.9 per cent in April.

Treasurer W. H. Churchill reported yesterday that last month's net sales were $2,871,433, as compared with $2,499,902 in the corresponding month last year. He added that sales for the first four months this year aggregated $11,095,292, or 14 per cent heavier than the $9,734,116 in the same 1942 period.

Meanwhile, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported last night that sales of a selected group of Washington department stores dropped 14 per cent in the week ended May 1, as compared with the same 1942 week. Department store sales in the entire Fifth Reserve District showed a decrease of only 1 per cent in the same week.

For the four weeks ended May 1, local store sales increased 12 per cent over the same 1942 period, while the entire Fifth District showed a gain of 18 per cent.

B. & O. Plans Financing

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. asked the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday for authority to asume liability for not more than $3,500,000 of equipment trust certificates, Series M, as a first step in financing the proposed purchase of $10,767,244 of locomotives and cars.

The company proposes to acquire three Diesel freight locomotives, 15 Diesel switching locomotives, 20 mallet freight locomotives and 965 hopper cars.

Count Fleet Held Greatest 'Sure Thing' of Year

Red Sox Score Twice in 9th, Beat Nats, 3 to 2

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

The Preakness is being run today on a double-feature basis, a sort of race within a race. Four other horses will leave the gate along with Count Fleet and sometime thereafter the field will settle down into two distinct contests.

POVICH

Heading the pack in the race for the $43,000 winner's end of the purse undoubtedly will be the Count. He figures to beat Blue Swords and Vincentive, the only others in the field who merit a place on the same track with Count Fleet. Blue Swords and Vincentive will be rewarded with the $10,000 and $5000 purses for second and third, depending on the order of their finish.

Somewhere up the track after Count Fleet crosses the finish line, the Preakness' secondary feature will still be in progress. A nag named New Moon and another hide named Radio Morale will be duelling it out for the Preakness' fourth money of $2000.

Radio Morale and New Moon apparently have no more right in the Preakness than a junk dealer's nag. They're in there strictly for the $2000 fourth place money, after Count Fleet's presence scared most of the other good three-year-olds out of the race.

New Moon is owned by Henry L. Straus, a Baltimorean who owns the race track totalizator machines. Business Man Straus apparently knows a good investment when he sees it. For a mere $500 starting fee, he sees a great chance to collect that $2000 four place money, with nothing to lick except Radio Morale.

As for Radio Morale, his presence in any race against Count Fleet is a crude joke. The last time that nag ran was in $2500 claiming company in which he finished a weary seventh. The King Ranch is gambling the $500 entry that Radio Morale can somehow lick New Moon for fourth money.

At that, the situation embellishes the running of the Preakness, laughable as the caliber of Radio Morale and New Moon may be. As a three-horse affair among Count Fleet, Blue Swords and Vincentive, the Preakness threatened to be a hollow race. If the race develops into a romp for Count Fleet, the customers can still look back up the track and see two horses staging an affair all their own for the $2000 fourth money.

Count Fleet will go to the post in the Preakness at a shorter price even than the 40 cents on a dollar he paid in the Derby. His chief contention undoubtedly will come from Blue Swords, which trailed him by three lengths in the Derby. The Count has licked Blue Swords pretty thoroughly this season, beating him also with great ease in the Wood Memorial.

In the Wood, Blue Swords left the gate in front of Count Fleet but Jockey Johnny Longden sent the Count around him and into the lead around the clubhouse turn. He pulled in front by three lengths entering the backstretch and it was three lengths at the finish, with Longden snuggled up on Count Fleet's neck talking to his horse with nary a stroke of the whip while Blue Swords was driving hard uselessly.

As for Vincentive, he was also a starter in the Wood. He has won a couple of races at Pimlico, but Vincentive's greatest fame as a three-year-old accrued when it developed that he was the horse that caused the commotion at the post in the Wood, resulting in Count Fleet being kicked and cut by Modest Lad.

It's none of our business, but the Chicago Cubs seem to have a hard nose in the case of Lou Novikoff, their Mad Russian, who has now held out for 48 days and is still refusing to join the team at the Cubs' salary terms.

Apparently Novikoff doesn't need the Cubs as much as the Cubs need Novikoff. They're in seventh place, due to a lack of hitting, and Novikoff last season was their only .300 hitter. Not only that but the Russian is an immense hero with Cub fans who are very much on his side in the salary squabble.

Novikoff's action in holding out for more dough as a ball player at a time when other men are entering the armed service at 50 bucks a month may be unseemly, but if there is any unfavorable reaction then the Cubs are responsible, too. They precipitated this salary argument.

The Cubs let themselves in for it when they offered Novikoff merely a $500 raise, or $6000 a year for the 1943 season. By his own estimates he is worth $10,000 a year. Be that as it may, $6000 is small pay for a .300 hitter of Novikoff's worth, according to big league standards, and the Cubs' insistence that he sign at that figure, is the root of the trouble. They're helping to make an issue of a money squabble they ought to hush up in these times.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, May 8.—With Count Fleet scaring the 3-year-olds out of races as rich as tomorrow's Preakness, it might appear that this won't be a very exciting racing year.

But it will be. As fine as he is, the Count is just a part of the racing scene, and the first one we heard admit that was his trainer, Don Cameron.

CONSIDINE

"There are more fine horses in training this year than in many years previously," he told us on the way up to the Preakness. "Look 'em over: Whirlaway, Alsab, Riverland, Market Wise, Shut Out, Askmenow, the hot new 2-year-olds coming up and, of course, the Count.

"They're going to make for a lot of good racing throughout the summer. You might keep your eye on Market Wise. He has looked swell in his workouts this spring. Good, game horse. Riverland is sound enough to clip a fraction off Seabiscuit's record for the mile and three-sixteenths at Pimlico. Alsab, they tell me, is bigger and stronger than he was last year. Whirlaway has been working well, and Shut Out is bound to come back strong. After all, Shut Out was the leading money winner of 1942. He topped Whirlaway, Alsab and all of them."

Cameron hopes to send the Count against the older stars later in the season, after he knocks off the clasical 3-year-old events. He may have to do so for competition, if things get any worse. It wouldn't surprise us to see the Count appear in a walkover this season. With only two or three facing him in the Preakness—which back in 1918 was so big that it had to be run in two sections—the wind would seem to be blowing that way. Will he win the Belmont by default?

Speaking of Cameron, who seems certain to become the sixth triple-crown trainer in racing history, it was interesting to hear him talking about some of Count's races with his friend and rival, Walter Kelley, trainer of Blue Swords, the animated coal car who has finished just behind Count Fleet six times in their careers. Horse trainers make an interesting use of the upright pronoun. A passer-by, not knowing Cameron, would have been startled to hear him say:

"Just before this race—the 1942 Washington Park Futurity—Clem McCarthy came up to me and said, 'You must have something, Don. I never saw a Scot who would ship a 2-year-old a thousand miles and pay a $2500 entry fee if he expected to lose.'

"Well, I'm knocked to my knees at the start. I'm cut off twice after that, and just when it looks like I'm going to win, a cameraman beats me. He jumps out in front of me for a picture and I shy away, just enough to let Occupation beat me by a neck for $60,000."

"I know," Kelley sympathized. "I was right behind you in third place."

Trainers are something like fight managers. We liked the way Al Weill once announced the fact that his battler, Arturo Godoy, had been signed to fight Joe Louis.

"I'm fighting Louis in June," said Al, who is so unwarlike in manner and physique that it's a wonder he hasn't won the Nobel Peace Prize, "and I think I'll beat him."

Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States fleet, on baseball: "Baseball has a rightful place in America at war. All work and no play seven days a week should soon take its toll of national morale. You people here today (at a Great Lakes game) have a right to such events as this baseball game. They will help you better fight the battle on the home front during the hard struggle ahead."

Nothing this writer can say could conceivably comfort those four grand Slocum boys in the loss of their father, Bill, one of the true jewels of the sportswriting trade.

Bill Slocum was everything a young writer hopes to be: Honest, kind, industrious, nimble with his typewriter and beloved by every man in baseball from Judge Landis to the bat boys. He was as gentle as anyone I ever met, and yet he'd speak his mind in the papers when there was a wrong that needed righting. The press boxes of the country's ball parks will miss this fine, warm-hearted man and the industry of baseball has lost one of its most articulate historians and one of its finest influences.

5 May Face Starter in Preakness

Blue Swords Choice For Second Place; Radio Morale Is Added Starter

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Pimlico, Md., May 7.—"If that horse doesn't win I'll make you a watch with my bare hands." This was the statement a horseman made as Count Fleet galloped along the backstretch this morning. And that just about sums up the high regard in which Mrs. John D. Hertz's gallant winner of the Kentucky Derby is held by almost everybody who talks horses these days. Yes, Count Fleet will go to the post in tomorrow's fifty-third running of the $50,000-added Preakness as the "super-cinch" favorite of all time hereabouts.

In seeking to make it two-thirds of the famous triple crown—Derby, Preakness, Belmont—Count Fleet probably will march postward in a field of five as a 1-to-5 shot and the old-timers feel that any price above that "will be stealing money."

Opposing the son of Reigh Count and Quickly will be four horses, unless one or more are scratched before post time. As was the case in the Derby, his chief opposition, if it can be so called, will be Allen T. Simmons' Blue Swords. This colt chased Count Fleet home at Louisville but was under a strong drive at the end, while "The Fleet" was coasting.

Vincentive Is Good

W. L. Brann's Vincentive will offer Count Fleet something new but few believe the Challenger II colt has anything the Hertz representative can't match. Messed around in the Wood Memorial, Vincentive came to Maryland to win twice over this track and thereby earned an entry. Nearby Maryland will have rooting interest in Vincentive because he is trained by E. A. Christmas, of the Upper Marlboro Christmases.

The entries of New Moon, owned by H. L. Straus, and the King Ranchs Radio Morale are looked upon as fourth-money investments. This amounts to $2000, which minus the $500 entry fee would mean a $1500 profit and more if scratches materialized.

However, R. L. Hall, jr., failed to get his Partido, claimed from the King Ranch, into the action when the handlers of that stable refused him permission to take over the nomination of this 3-year-old.

If the field of five goes, and

Yale to Play 12 Grid Games In New Season

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., May 7.—Yale announced plans today to play 12 football games next fall—longest gridiron schedule in its modern athletic history.

The news came right on top of arch-rival Havard's decision to quit the game for the duration.

So while the crowning Ivy League football spectacle will be missing this year for the first time since 1918, Yale's head coach, Howard Odell, is busily trying to find four opponents for September and a fifth to fill Harvard's place at the end of the season.

The September games will be the added element. Yale regularly plays eight games, starting the first week in October. The Elis mentor, who made his debut here last year with "Big Three" triumphs over Harvard and Princeton, explained that Yale wanted the four early season encounters "so that Capt. Tim Hoops and several other veterans can play a few games before being graduated next October, and because the Bulldogs will be ready for action by then."

The Yale squad, augmented by eligible Navy units, will start practice early in July.

Back in the gay nineties, the Elis went in for 16-game schedules, but long seasons went out of the picture along with the murderous flying wedge, yellow shoes, handlebar mustaches and the horse and buggy.

Playing September contests won't be exactly new to Odell's charges. Last year, the Blue concluded summer drills with tests against the Army's Eastern All-Stars, who drilled here; Columbia and the United States Military Academy. But, those were informal and hardly the real thing.

Lt. Phelan, Army Hockey, Net Star Killed in Crash

By the Associated Press

New York, May 7.—Lieut. John Francis Phelan, who was graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point last year, was killed Wednesday in an airplane crash near San Diego, Calif., his father, Lieut. Col. C. A. Phelan, was notified by the War Department today.

Lieutenant Phelan was a member of the hockey team and was intramural tennis champion. He was a pistol sharpshooter and a machine-gun expert.

He was born at West Point when his father was stationed there, with the Army specialist training program in New York City.

Funeral services will be held at West Point next week.

G. W. Golfers Score, 6 to 0

Paced by Bill Griffin, who took low scoring honors with a 75, George Washington University's golfers defeated Johns Hopkins, 6 and 0, yesterday on the Kenwood links.

Other members of the Colonial team closely followed the pace setter in the rout of the Baltimoreans, all scoring 77s.

Bill Brewaiga (G. W.) defeated Bob Gelina, 3 and 2.
Bill Griffin (G. W.) defeated Walt Brannan, 5 and 4.
Best ball—G. W., 4 and 3.
Bob Greenlaner (G. W.) defeated Ray Wallace, 5 and 4.
Hal Birmingham (G. W.) defeated Charlie Wilhide, 3 and 4.

St. John's Golfers Win, 4-2, Over Bethesda

A couple of firsts featured yesterday's golf match between St. Johns and Bethesda-Chevy Chase, which went to the Johnnies, 4-2. The two firsts were, the Barons initial loss and the Johnnies first victory. Jack Donnelly of Bethesda, and Bob Clark of St. Johns, had low scores with 78's.

The results:
R. Clark (St. J) defeated Lanier, 2 and 1; Boshes (St. J) defeated Burgdorf, 4 and 2. Best ball, St. John's, 3 and 2.
D. Clark (St. J) defeated Hodges, 2 and 1; Donnelly (B) defeated Thomas, 6 and 5. Best ball, Bethesda, 3 and 4.

Rookie Wensloff Hurls As Yanks Beat A's, 6-2

By the Associated Press

New York, May 7.—Paced by a pair of their farm graduates, Charley Wensloff and Bill Johnson, the New York Yankees blasted out a 6-to-2 decision over the Philadelphia Athletics today to maintain their position at the head of the American League parade.

Wensloff, who won 21 games for Kansas City in the American Association last year, hurled six-hit ball and with Johnson, up from Newark, connecting with his first major league homer and driving in a total of four runs, the 26-year-old Californian had no trouble winning his initial big-time victory.

In hitting safely in his eighth successive game, Johnson drove out a three-run homer in the third, climaxing a four-run attack, and sent another tally across the plate in the seventh with a single after Nick Etten had led off with a triple. In between he got a double.

Johnson's four runs driven in boosted his total for the season to 11. Etten, who unloaded a triple and a single and drove in one run, also has driven in 11 tallies this season.

In accounting for their fifth straight victory, the Yankees jumped on three Philadelphia hurlers for 10 safe blows. Wensloff held the visitors to two hits until the seventh, when Babe Siebert's double and Pete Suder's single produced their first run.

Vernon Steals Second Base

Mickey Vernon's theft of second in the fourth inning last night paved the way to the Nats' first run which tied the score at 1-1. A second later, Gerry Priddy singled Mickey home. Peacock's throw to Doerr was wild and bounced away (arrow) but Vernon had the base stolen anyway. But the Nats lost to the Red Sox, 3-2, before 17,177 at the season's first night game

Livlier Ball Due This Weekend

New York, May 7.—The new edition of the Balata wartime baseball, geared for a much livelier tempo than the one with which the major leagues started the season, will make its first appearance in both circuits this weekend.

President Ford Frick of the National League said today he expected to advise his clubs to start using the new ball tomorrow since it had been shipped to all teams. President Will Harridge of the American League was not at his office in Chicago but the New York Yankees said they had been told to put the new baseball into use Sunday.

Galan's Hits Aid Dodgers to Nip Braves, 9-7

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 7.—A five-run attack in the second inning sent the Brooklyn Dodgers off to a flying start in their initial game of the season with the Boston Braves today but before they achieved a 9-to-7 victory the National League leaders had to come from behind.

Al Javery was the victim of the big second frame, climaxed by Augie Galan's three-run homer. But then he settled down and blanked the Dodgers until the seventh inning. Meantime, the Braves, who scored one run in the first, kept punching away at Ed Head and Les Webber until they held a 7-5 margin going into the seventh. Eddie Joost accounted for two of the tallies with a homer in the fourth.

Johnny Allen took over the Brooklyn hurling in the seventh after the Dodgers had knotted the count and blanked the Braves the remainder of the distance for his third victory of the season—all in relief roles.

Galan's single off George Jeffcoat, third of the four Boston pitchers to see action, scored Alex Kampouris in the eighth to break the tie. That run caused Jeffcoat to be charged with the defeat although the Dodgers picked up another tally in the ninth.

Lake Hits Double to Beat Wynn

Griffmen Outhit Bosox, 7 to 6; 17,177 See First Night Tilt of Year

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Early Wynn and the Nats, on the threshhold of a four-hit victory, were smacked into a 3-2 defeat last night when the Red Sox put on a ninth-inning snatch act that displeased the nocturnal gathering of 17,177 fans.

Wynn and the Nats went into the ninth inning with a 2-1 lead and came out of it with a licking in their first night venture of the season.

Peacock's Hit Ties Score

Wynn, who had allowed only four hits to that point, walked Rookie Tom McBride and he was sacrificed to second. Johnny Peacock thereupon erased the Nats' 2-1 lead by scoring McBride with a single to right. Peacock moved to second on Mike Ryba's infield out, and galloped home when Lake produced his two bagger.

Ryba was the winning pitcher as the Red Sox broke a five-game losing streak. He relieved Yank Terry at the start of the seventh and held the Nats scoreless thereafter. Jake Early's single to right with one out put the tying run on base for the Nats in the ninth, but they flunked out when Pinch Hitter Gene Moore fanned on three pitches and Pinch Hitter George Myatt tapped the ball to Ryba.

Rookie Lake's game-winning double was his second two-base blow of the game. The Nats outhit the Red Sox, 7 to 6, if that's any consolation.

Wynn gave up a 1-0 lead to the Sox in the fourth inning but it was scarcely his fault. Bobby Doerr got a home run on a ball hit to deep center on which Stan Spence broke in the wrong direction. With a chance to hold the ball to a triple, after retrieving it, Spence threw wild to the infield, and Doerr romped all the way home. It was Boston's first homer of the season.

Nats Tie Score in Fourth

The Nats tied the score at 1-1 in their half of the fourth inning with their first hit off big Yank Terry. With two out, Mickey Vernon drew a walk and promptly stole second, whereupon Priddy promptly scored him with a single to center.

George Case and Stan Spence lifted the Nats into the lead in the sixth, before anybody was out. Case drilled a two-bagger past Joe Cronin and Spence got him home with a single to left. The Nats missed a chance for a big inning when Cronin grabbed the relay from the outfield and pitched it to Doerr, who tagged Spence trying to take second on the throw-in.

Anyway, that run moved the Nats into a 2-to-1 lead, which stood up nicely until Wynn let the Sox get out of hand in the ninth.

Hawaii Held Ideal Field for Christian Work

Declaring that "the Hawaiian Island racial experiment is an outstanding success," a report presented to the National Council of the Protestant Church this week in New York said the islands "constitute one of the greatest opportunities for Christian work that has ever opened to the church."

The report, made by the Right Rev. Stephen E. Keeler, Bishop Coadjutor of Minnesota, who recently returned from a visit to the islands, was placed before the council by Presiding Bishop Henry St. George Tucker.

It said that on the islands "there is a mingling, socially, of every race, without friction, with complete understanding and sympathy; with no indication whatever of racial jealousy or antagonism."

The report said that schools formerly under the influence of Japanese have been closed by law, and Japanese-American students, once taught emperor worship and Japanese tradition, now were flocking to the church.

"From one island after another," Bishop Keeler reported, "come reports of many baptisms of teenage boys and girls of Japanese ancestry, and on his trip the bishop confirmed many."

He said Japanese-American boys were enlisting in the American Army in large numbers, and "are eager to prove their loyalty."

The churches "are performing a splendid service," Bishop Keeler reported, in ministry to American sailors and soldiers on the island, providing "activities looking for the welfare of the soldier and sailor, particularly the men on leave."

Maid Dearth Puzzles Writer Of Mysteries

Leslie Ford, who writes those smooth concoctions of murder-mystery and Capital intrigue, is back in Washington, smack up against a local situation which has more mystery than intrigue for her.

Miss Ford, privately the wife of Comdr. Ford K. Brown, U. S. N., just can't find a maid for the Georgetown house she came here to reopen.

So, temporarily "marooned" at the Mayflower Hotel, she is making plans for another of her well-known books with a Washington locale. Nothing more positive will happen until some local domestic relents and permits the author to reoccupy her home. Because Leslie Ford can write only in more or less complete seclusion. And the Mayflower is a busy place these days.

Miss Ford spent the past five weeks in Annapolis in order to be near her husband who is ill in the Naval Hospital there.

She wouldn't say what her latest book will be like, but thought she might get around to the actual writing in about a month.

If she follows her established formula of working in longhand, from 9 in the morning until 5 every afternoon, it probably won't be much beyond the end of June when her book is completed.

Peoples Drug Sales Up 15% During April

By S. Oliver Goodman

Continuing a record-breaking pace, sales of the Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., soared 14.9 per cent in April.

Treasurer W. H. Churchill reported yesterday that last month's net sales were $2,871,433, as compared with $2,499,902 in the corresponding month last year. He added that sales for the first four months this year aggregated $11,095,292, or 14 per cent heavier than the $9,734,116 in the same 1942 period.

Meanwhile, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported last night that sales of a selected group of Washington department stores dropped 14 per cent in the week ended May 1, as compared with the same 1942 week. Department store sales in the entire Fifth Reserve District showed a decrease of only 1 per cent in the same week.

For the four weeks ended May 1, local store sales increased 12 per cent over the same 1942 period, while the entire Fifth District showed a gain of 18 per cent.

Count Fleet Held Greatest 'Sure Thing' of Year

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

The Preakness is being run today on a double-feature basis, a sort of race within a race. Four other horses will leave the gate along with Count Fleet and sometime thereafter the field will settle down into two distinct contests.

POVICH

Heading the pack in the race for the $43,000 winner's end of the purse undoubtedly will be the Count. He figures to beat Blue Swords and Vincentive, the only others in the field who merit a place on the same track with Count Fleet. Blue Swords and Vincentive will be rewarded with the $10,000 and $5000 purses for second and third, depending on the order of their finish.

Somewhere up the track after Count Fleet crosses the finish line, the Preakness' secondary feature will still be in progress. A nag named New Moon and another hide named Radio Morale will be duelling it out for the Preakness' fourth money of $2000.

Radio Morale and New Moon apparently have no more right in the Preakness than a junk dealer's nag. They're in there strictly for the $2000 fourth place money, after Count Fleet's presence scared most of the other good three-year-olds out of the race.

New Moon is owned by Henry L. Straus, a Baltimorean who owns the race track totalizator machines. Business Man Straus apparently knows a good investment when he sees it. For a mere $500 starting fee, he sees a great chance to collect that $2000 four place money, with nothing to lick except Radio Morale.

As for Radio Morale, his presence in any race against Count Fleet is a crude joke. The last time that nag ran was in $2500 claiming company in which he finished a weary seventh. The King Ranch is gambling the $500 entry that Radio Morale can somehow lick New Moon for fourth money.

At that, the situation embellishes the running of the Preakness, laughable as the caliber of Radio Morale and New Moon may be. As a three-horse affair among Count Fleet, Blue Swords and Vincentive, the Preakness threatened to be a hollow race. If the race develops into a romp for Count Fleet, the customers can still look back up the track and see two horses staging an affair all their own for the $2000 fourth money.

Count Fleet will go to the post in the Preakness at a shorter price even than the 40 cents on a dollar he paid in the Derby. His chief contention undoubtedly will come from Blue Swords, which trailed him by three lengths in the Derby. The Count has licked Blue Swords pretty thoroughly this season, beating him also with great ease in the Wood Memorial.

In the Wood, Blue Swords left the gate in front of Count Fleet but Jockey Johnny Longden sent the Count around him and into the lead around the clubhouse turn. He pulled in front by three lengths entering the backstretch and it was three lengths at the finish, with Longden snuggled up on Count Fleet's neck talking to his horse with nary a stroke of the whip while Blue Swords was driving hard uselessly.

As for Vincentive, he was also a starter in the Wood. He has won a couple of races at Pimlico, but Vincentive's greatest fame as a three-year-old accrued when it developed that he was the horse that caused the commotion at the post in the Wood, resulting in Count Fleet being kicked and cut by Modest Lad.

It's none of our business, but the Chicago Cubs seem to have a hard nose in the case of Lou Novikoff, their Mad Russian, who has now held out for 48 days and is still refusing to join the team at the Cubs' salary terms.

Apparently Novikoff doesn't need the Cubs as much as the Cubs need Novikoff. They're in seventh place, due to a lack of hitting, and Novikoff last season was their only .300 hitter. Not only that but the Russian is an immense hero with Cub fans who are very much on his side in the salary squabble.

Novikoff's action in holding out for more dough as a ball player at a time when other men are entering the armed service at 50 bucks a month may be unseemly, but if there is any unfavorable reaction then the Cubs are responsible, too. They precipitated this salary argument.

The Cubs let themselves in for it when they offered Novikoff merely a $500 raise, or $6000 a year for the 1943 season. By his own estimates he is worth $10,000 a year. Be that as it may, $6000 is small pay for a .300 hitter of Novikoff's worth, according to big league standards, and the Cubs' insistence that he sign at that figure, is the root of the trouble. They're helping to make an issue of a money squabble they ought to hush up in these times.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, May 8.—With Count Fleet scaring the 3-year-olds out of races as rich as tomorrow's Preakness, it might appear that this won't be a very exciting racing year.

But it will be. As fine as he is, the Count is just a part of the racing scene, and the first one we heard admit that was his trainer, Don Cameron.

CONSIDINE

"There are more fine horses in training this year than in many years previously," he told us on the way up to the Preakness. "Look 'em over: Whirlaway, Alsab, Riverland, Market Wise, Shut Out, Askmenow, the hot new 2-year-olds coming up and, of course, the Count.

"They're going to make for a lot of good racing throughout the summer. You might keep your eye on Market Wise. He has looked swell in his workouts this spring. Good, game horse. Riverland is sound enough to clip a fraction off Seabiscuit's record for the mile and three-sixteenths at Pimlico. Alsab, they tell me, is bigger and stronger than he was last year. Whirlaway has been working well, and Shut Out is bound to come back strong. After all, Shut Out was the leading money winner of 1942. He topped Whirlaway, Alsab and all of them."

Cameron hopes to send the Count against the older stars later in the season, after he knocks off the clasical 3-year-old events. He may have to do so for competition, if things get any worse. It wouldn't surprise us to see the Count appear in a walkover this season. With only two or three facing him in the Preakness—which back in 1918 was so big that it had to be run in two sections—the wind would seem to be blowing that way. Will he win the Belmont by default?

Speaking of Cameron, who seems certain to become the sixth triple-crown trainer in racing history, it was interesting to hear him talking about some of Count's races with his friend and rival, Walter Kelley, trainer of Blue Swords, the animated coal car who has finished just behind Count Fleet six times in their careers. Horse trainers make an interesting use of the upright pronoun. A passer-by, not knowing Cameron, would have been startled to hear him say:

"Just before this race—the 1942 Washington Park Futurity—Clem McCarthy came up to me and said, 'You must have something, Don. I never saw a Scot who would ship a 2-year-old a thousand miles and pay a $2500 entry fee if he expected to lose.'

"Well, I'm knocked to my knees at the start. I'm cut off twice after that, and just when it looks like I'm going to win, a cameraman beats me. He jumps out in front of me for a picture and I shy away, just enough to let Occupation beat me by a neck for $60,000."

"I know," Kelley sympathized. "I was right behind you in third place."

Trainers are something like fight managers. We liked the way Al Weill once announced the fact that his battler, Arturo Godoy, had been signed to fight Joe Louis.

"I'm fighting Louis in June," said Al, who is so unwarlike in manner and physique that it's a wonder he hasn't won the Nobel Peace Prize, "and I think I'll beat him."

Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States fleet, on baseball: "Baseball has a rightful place in America at war. All work and no play seven days a week should soon take its toll of national morale. You people here today (at a Great Lakes game) have a right to such events as this baseball game. They will help you better fight the battle on the home front during the hard struggle ahead."

Nothing this writer can say could conceivably comfort those four grand Slocum boys in the loss of their father, Bill, one of the true jewels of the sportswriting trade.

Bill Slocum was everything a young writer hopes to be: Honest, kind, industrious, nimble with his typewriter and beloved by every man in baseball from Judge Landis to the bat boys. He was as gentle as anyone I ever met, and yet he'd speak his mind in the papers when there was a wrong that needed righting. The press boxes of the country's ball parks will miss this fine, warm-hearted man and the industry of baseball has lost one of its most articulate historians and one of its finest influences.

5 May Face Starter in Preakness

Blue Swords Choice For Second Place; Radio Morale Is Added Starter

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Pimlico, Md., May 7.—"If that horse doesn't win I'll make you a watch with my bare hands." This was the statement a horseman made as Count Fleet galloped along the backstretch this morning. And that just about sums up the high regard in which Mrs. John D. Hertz's gallant winner of the Kentucky Derby is held by almost everybody who talks horses these days. Yes, Count Fleet will go to the post in tomorrow's fifty-third running of the $50,000-added Preakness as the "super-cinch" favorite of all time hereabouts.

In seeking to make it two-thirds of the famous triple crown—Derby, Preakness, Belmont—Count Fleet probably will march postward in a field of five as a 1-to-5 shot and the old-timers feel that any price above that "will be stealing money."

Opposing the son of Reigh Count and Quickly will be four horses, unless one or more are scratched before post time. As was the case in the Derby, his chief opposition, if it can be so called, will be Allen T. Simmons' Blue Swords. This colt chased Count Fleet home at Louisville but was under a strong drive at the end, while "The Fleet" was coasting.

Vincentive Is Good

W. L. Brann's Vincentive will offer Count Fleet something new but few believe the Challenger II colt has anything the Hertz representative can't match. Messed around in the Wood Memorial, Vincentive came to Maryland to win twice over this track and thereby earned an entry. Nearby Maryland will have rooting interest in Vincentive because he is trained by E. A. Christmas, of the Upper Marlboro Christmases.

The entries of New Moon, owned by H. L. Straus, and the King Ranchs Radio Morale are looked upon as fourth-money investments. This amounts to $2000, which minus the $500 entry fee would mean a $1500 profit and more if scratches materialized.

However, R. L. Hall, jr., failed to get his Partido, claimed from the King Ranch, into the action when the handlers of that stable refused him permission to take over the nomination of this 3-year-old.

If the field of five goes, and

Lt. Phelan, Army Hockey, Net Star Killed in Crash

By the Associated Press

New York, May 7.—Lieut. John Francis Phelan, who was graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point last year, was killed Wednesday in an airplane crash near San Diego, Calif., his father, Lieut. Col. C. A. Phelan, was notified by the War Department today.

Lieutenant Phelan was a member of the hockey team and was intramural tennis champion. He was a pistol sharpshooter and a machine-gun expert.

He was born at West Point when his father was stationed there, with the Army specialist training program in New York City.

Funeral services will be held at West Point next week.

G. W. Golfers Score, 6 to 0

Paced by Bill Griffin, who took low scoring honors with a 75, George Washington University's golfers defeated Johns Hopkins, 6 and 0, yesterday on the Kenwood links.

Other members of the Colonial team closely followed the pace setter in the rout of the Baltimoreans, all scoring 77s.

Bill Brownige (G. W.) defeated Bob Gelina, 3 and 2.
Bill Griffin (G. W.) defeated Walt Brannan, 5 and 4.
Best ball—G. W., 4 and 3.
Bob Greetzinger (G. W.) defeated Ray Wallace, 5 and 4.
Hal Birmingham (G. W.) defeated Charlie Wilhide, 5 and 4.
Best ball—G. W., 5 and 4.

St. John's Golfers Win, 4-2, Over Bethesda

A couple of firsts featured yesterday's golf match between St. Johns and Bethesda-Chevy Chase, which went to the Johnnies, 4-2. The two firsts were, the Barons initial loss and the Johnnies first victory. Jack Donnelly of Bethesda, and Bob Clark of St. Johns, had low scores with 78's.

The results:
R. Clark (St. J) defeated Lanier, 2 and 1; Roshes (St. J) defeated Bursdoph, 4 and 3. Best ball, St. John's, 3 and 2.
D. Clark (St. J) defeated Hodges, 3 and 1; Donnelly (B) defeated Thomas, 6 and 5. Best ball, Bethesda, 6 and 5.

Yale to Play 12 Grid Games In New Season

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., May 7.—Yale announced plans today to play 12 football games next fall—longest gridiron schedule in its modern athletic history.

The news came right on top of arch-rival Havard's decision to quit the game for the duration.

So while the crowning Ivy League football spectacle will be missing this year for the first time since 1918, Yale's head coach, Howard Odell, is busily trying to find four opponents for September and a fifth to fill Harvard's place at the end of the season.

The September games will be the added element. Yale regularly plays eight games, starting the first week in October. The Elis mentor, who made his debut here last year with "Big Three" triumphs over Harvard and Princeton, explained that Yale wanted the four early season encounters "so that Capt. Tim Hoops and several other veterans can play a few games before being graduated next October, and because the Bulldogs will be ready for action by then."

The Yale squad, augmented by eligible Navy units, will start practice early in July.

Back in the gay nineties, the Elis went in for 16-game schedules, but long seasons went out of the picture along with the murderous flying wedge, yellow shoes, handlebar mustaches and the horse and buggy.

Playing September contests won't be exactly new to Odell's charges. Last year, the Blue concluded summer drills with tests against the Army's Eastern All-Stars, who drilled here; Columbia and the United States Military Academy. But, those were informal and hardly the real thing.

Rookie Wensloff Hurls As Yanks Beat A's, 6-2

By the Associated Press

New York, May 7.—Paced by a pair of their farm graduates, Charley Wensloff and Bill Johnson, the New York Yankees blasted out a 6-to-2 decision over the Philadelphia Athletics today to maintain their position at the head of the American League parade.

Wensloff, who won 21 games for Kansas City in the American Association last year, hurled six-hit ball and with Johnson, up from Newark, connecting with his first major league homer and driving in a total of four runs, the 26-year-old Californian had no trouble winning his initial big-time victory.

In hitting safely in his eighth successive game, Johnson drove out a three-run homer in the third, climaxing a four-run attack, and sent another tally across the plate in the seventh with a single after Nick Etten had led off with a triple. In between he got a double.

Johnson's four runs driven in boosted his total for the season to 11. Etten, who unloaded a triple and a single and drove in one run, also has driven in 11 tallies this season.

In accounting for their fifth straight victory, the Yankees jumped on three Philadelphia hurlers for 10 safe blows. Wensloff held the visitors to two hits until the seventh, when Babe Siebert's double and Pete Suder's single produced their first run.

Vernon Steals Second Base

Mickey Vernon's theft of second in the fourth inning last night paved the way to the Nats' first run which tied the score at 1-1. A second later, Gerry Priddy singled Mickey home. Peacock's throw to Doerr was wild and bounced away (arrow) but Vernon had the base stolen anyway. But the Nats lost to the Red Sox, 3-2, before 17,177 at the season's first night game

Livlier Ball Due This Weekend

New York, May 7.—The new edition of the Balata wartime baseball, geared for a much livelier tempo than the one with which the major leagues started the season, will make its first appearance in both circuits this weekend.

President Ford Frick of the National League said today he expected to advise his clubs to start using the new ball tomorrow since it had been shipped to all teams. President Will Harridge of the American League was not at his office in Chicago but the New York Yankees said they had been told to put the new baseball into use Sunday.

Galan's Hits Aid Dodgers to Nip Braves, 9-7

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 7.—A five-run attack in the second inning sent the Brooklyn Dodgers off to a flying start in their initial game of the season with the Boston Braves today but before they achieved a 9-to-7 victory the National League leaders had to come from behind.

Al Javery was the victim of the big second frame, climaxed by Augie Galan's three-run homer. But then he settled down and blanked the Dodgers until the seventh inning. Meantime, the Braves, who scored one run in the first, kept punching away at Ed Head and Les Webber until they held a 7-5 margin going into the seventh. Eddie Joost accounted for two of the tallies with a homer in the fourth.

Johnny Allen took over the Brooklyn hurling in the seventh after the Dodgers had knotted the count and blanked the Braves the remainder of the distance for his third victory of the season—all in relief roles.

Galan's single off George Jeffcoat, third of the four Boston pitchers to see action, scored Alex Kampouris in the eighth to break the tie. That run caused Jeffcoat to be charged with the defeat although the Dodgers picked up another tally in the ninth.

Lake Hits Double to Beat Wynn

Griffmen Outhit Bosox, 7 to 6; 17,177 See First Night Tilt of Year

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Early Wynn and the Nats, on the threshhold of a four-hit victory, were smacked into a 3-2 defeat last night when the Red Sox put on a ninth-inning snatch act that displeased the nocturnal gathering of 17,177 fans.

Wynn and the Nats went into the ninth inning with a 2-1 lead and came out of it with a licking in their first night venture of the season.

Peacock's Hit Ties Score

Wynn, who had allowed only four hits to that point, walked Rookie Tom McBride and he was sacrificed to second. Johnny Peacock thereupon erased the Nats' 2-1 lead by scoring McBride with a single to right. Peacock moved to second on Mike Ryba's infield out, and galloped home when Lake produced his two bagger.

Ryba was the winning pitcher as the Red Sox broke a five-game losing streak. He relieved Yank Terry at the start of the seventh and held the Nats scoreless thereafter. Jake Early's single to right with one out put the tying run on base for the Nats in the ninth, but they flunked out when Pinch Hitter Gene Moore fanned on three pitches and Pinch Hitter George Myatt tapped the ball to Ryba.

Rookie Lake's game-winning double was his second two-base blow of the game. The Nats outhit the Red Sox, 7 to 6, if that's any consolation.

Wynn gave up a 1-0 lead to the Sox in the fourth inning but it was scarcely his fault. Bobby Doerr got a home run on a ball hit to deep center on which Stan Spence broke in the wrong direction. With a chance to hold the ball to a triple, after retrieving it, Spence threw wild to the infield, and Doerr romped all the way home. It was Boston's first homer of the season.

Nats Tie Score in Fourth

The Nats tied the score at 1-1 in their half of the fourth inning with their first hit off big Yank Terry. With two out, Mickey Vernon drew a walk and promptly stole second, whereupon Priddy promptly scored him with a single to center.

George Case and Stan Spence lifted the Nats into the lead in the sixth, before anybody was out. Case drilled a two-bagger past Joe Cronin and Spence got him home with a single to left. The Nats missed a chance for a big inning when Cronin grabbed the relay from the outfield and pitched it to Doerr, who tagged Spence trying to take second on the throw-in.

Anyway, that run moved the Nats into a 2-to-1 lead, which stood up nicely until Wynn let the Sox get out of hand in the ninth.

Woolf Gives Galactic Great Ride to Win Nursery Stakes

Jockey Rides Vincentive In Preakness

Brings Mrs. Weir's Horse From Behind To Take $2500 Race at Pimlico

By a Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., May 7.—Jockey George Woolf warmed up for his Preakness ride on W. L. Brann's Vincentive by winning the $2500 added Pimlico Nursery Stakes here this afternoon. It was a masterpiece of saddle work, too, for he brought Mrs. E. Dupont Weir's Galactic from far behind to win in "going away" fashion. E. K. Bryson's Elray was headed out of the top money of $3010. Allen T. Simmons' Sir Drake, a stablemate of Blue Swords and the favorite in the field of eight, was third in dash of four and a half furlongs.

Galactic was only lukewarm in the wagering and returned a $10.20 mutuel while stepping the short sprint route in 0:55 4-5 over a fast track.

Galactic Off Slowly

Victory Blue and Elray battled for the early pace and the latter won this affair, taking a length advantage in the stretch. Galactic, in the meanwhile was off slowly and Sir Drake was racing on the outside. Sir Drake's bid lacked punch and Elray looked all the part of a winner a sixteenth from home. At this point, Woolf roused Galactic and the youngster, who had been gaining gradually, put on a spurt that was not to be denied.

Alan T. Clarke former big league baseball pitcher, saddled his Bola Mowlee for the fourth time at this meeting and the 4-year-old filly turned in her third victory. Despite her record she was overlooked in the wagering and returned an $88.50 mutuel to scattered backers. The daughter of Mowlee and Bubola won by two and a half lengths from J. K. Wynkoops Lord Vatout with J. L. Friedman's Overlin in third position in the field of 11 going 6 furlongs. Bola Mowlee put the finishing touches on a $381.90 daily double and was clocked 1:12 4-5.

Clarke Saddles Two

Clarke, leading conditioner of the meeting, saddled his second winner of the day in the fourth race and again his representative was a longshot. This time Jockey Joe Renick drove Nell Mowlee home two and half lengths in advance of E. K. Bryson's Wine Punch with Mrs. H. W. Jackson's Ariel Patrol third in the group of seven going a mile and 70 yards. Nell Mowlee was always close. She came to the outside of Wine Punch entering the stretch and then drew out. The winner paid $24.60 and was clocked in 1:45 2/5.

Brownies Release Keller to Toledo

St. Louis, May 7 (AP).—The job of third-string catcher for the St. Louis Browns went to Joe Schultz today with Ardys Keller being returned to Toledo on 24-hour option.

The Ladies, Bless 'Em, Have Their Day at the Races at Old Pimlico

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Lady jockeys rode yesterday in their annual Ladies Handicap at Pimlico, feature of the track's spring meeting, and a likely looking group of riders they turned out to be, too. Left to right, they are: Mrs. Peter Hogan, Mrs. Sid Hirst, Mrs. Judy Johnson, a licensed steeplechase rider, Mrs. Sarah Merryman, Peggy Squier, Mrs. Anna Lee Riles, who turned out the winner on Flying Tiger, Mary Graff and Mrs. J. H. C. Forbes.

Selections at Pimlico

Dear Al:

Count Fleet all the way. That's the answer to today's Preakness. The Hertz Express did everything asked in the Kentucky Derby except fast time, and I look for him to show more speed today. Blue Swords chased him home at Louisville and should do it again. Vincentive has shown enough to warrant the third selection. New Moon and Radio Morale apparently have been entered with fourth money in mind. And speaking of fourth money, Robert L. Hall, jr., of Upper Marlboro, Md., missed his chance to run Partido, the horse he claimed from the King Ranch for $3500. Here's what happened: Hall had to obtain permission of King Ranch to use Partido's Preakness nomination. Acting for Hall, I phoned Congressman Richard M. Kleberg Thursday night. He said that I would have to get in touch with his brother, Robert J. Kleberg who is managing the farm at Kingsville, Tex. I phoned him, and "R. J." said that he saw no reason why Hall should not be allowed to start the horse. He said he would send a telegram confirming his statement to the Maryland Jockey Club and I dictated the message. Hall had tried to contact, Max Hirsch, trainer for the King Ranch, early in the evening. Yesterday morning, the entries were delayed for 20 minutes while Yancey Christmas, trainer for Hall, awaited the King Ranch consent from Texas. When the message arrived it read "Regarding phone conversation last night, the matter must be referred to Trainer Max Hirsch." In the meanwhile, Hirsch had entered the King Ranch's Radio Morale, a maiden in the Preakness. The rule forcing persons who claim a horse eligible for a race to obtain the transfer from the original nominator, is a measure that only serves to protect the horse from claiming. In my book, if a horse is entered in a claiming race, his stake engagements should go with him. At any rate I'll see you on the rail here today and Charles Town Monday. BILL.

First race—Redlands is reported to be fit and the one time champ looks best. Valpuiseaux was allowed to drop far back last out and with better handling should be a factor. Broadside King for the show end.

Second race—Most Alert has been rested and seems ready to defeat these. Here Goes has speed and will be a threat. Grand Gay deserves respect.

Third race—Tinchel has speed and seems to have the edge on the fleet juveniles. Love Pact won nicely over this course and is dangerous. The Abelt entry for the show end.

Fifth race—Cassis gets a heavy assignment of 122 pounds but seems to have class enough to turn back these. Trelawny turned in a brilliant effort last out and belongs close. Cape Cod for the show end.

Sixth race—Count Fleed, Blue Swords and Vincentive.

Seventh race—Georl Lamaze has found the right spot in this company and I see no reason for mistakes. Radio Wave is improving and might take it all. Mightily for the minor award.

Eighth race—Misrule, Biscayne Blue and Butcher Boy is the way I prefer them in the finale of the day and the meeting.

Best bet—Count Fleet.

Mrs. Riles Wins Ladies Handicap

Special Dispatch to The Post

Pimlico, May 7.—The Ladies' Handicap, an annual spring feature at Pimlico, drew eight pretty girl jockeys today.

Mrs. Ann Lee Riles, a newcomer to the Maryland Jockey Club's girl jockey ranks, displayed real saddle ability when she drove Flying Tiger first to the wire with a four-length margin over Rath Ronon, handled by Mrs. Sara Merryman, the former Sara Bosley, who won the third renewal of the race two years ago.

The lone "professional" in the group, Judy Johnson, who has ridden in steeplechases at the meeting, finished third atop Lead 'Em All, while Mrs. Peter Hagen was fourth on Question Man and Mrs. J. H. C. Forbes took the fifth position on Blensign.

Approximately 3000 early arrivals witnessed the event.

Mrs. Riles made every post of the 4½-furlong dash a winning one, however, and was looking back over her shoulder when Flying Tiger galloped to finish line with speed in reserve.

When winning rider and mount returned to the charmed enclosure they were greeted by Harry Parr, president of the Maryland Jockey Club, who presented Mrs. Riles with a wrist watch.

Dee Lampros, Western left-hander, yesterday achieved the goal of all pitchers—a no-hit-no-run game. The Raider southpaw, making only his second start of the year, set Coolidge's Colts down, 7-0, as Western retained a mathematical chance at second place, one of the two playoff berths. Coolidge, with one win and three losses, has no chance at the championship.

In other games yesterday, Tech moved up a half game on idle Eastern by routing Anacostia, 23-2. The Indians, by virtue of this loss, also dropped out of the title running. Roosevelt took Central into camp, 12-9, in a game that saw 38 hits ring off the Viking and Rider bats.

Pitches No-Hitter

As Lampros was sailing along with a mixture of curves and slow stuff to the first no-hitter pitched by one man this year, his mates were giving almost flawless support. Brian Bell booted Paul Sickel's grounder for the only Raider miscue. This was the first perfect game that has been turned in in a series tilt for over a decade.

Western jumped on Bob Holzberlein, Colt hurler, for a run in the first and put the clincher on it with three markers in the sixth and two more in the eighth. Tony Bickle led the Raiders at the plate with a triple and a single in three trips. The three-base knock was the big blow of the sixth frame. Jack Walker also rapped out two safeties for the winners.

Gives 19 Hits, but Wins

Leigh Joy went the route, although nicked for 19 hits, in winning his second series game over Central, 12-9. Joe Tucker started for the Vikings but was relieved after four and two-thirds innings by Bill Plunkitt, who finished the game. Tucker was touched for 13 hits, while Plunkitt gave only six.

A big six-run, second inning outburst gave the Riders a lead that was never relinquished. It was one of those "after two were out" affairs. Billy Ruppert and Marvin Gelles both got life on miscues by Central's Shortstop Carl Riddle and Joy inserted a hit, driving in Ruppert and moving Gelles to third. Bunny Citrenbaum walked and Ollie Kennedy followed with a hit sending two more scores across. Joe Johnson also singled and Charley Howard tripled to account for the other three markers.

Tech Beats Anacostia

Five runs in the second and seven more in the third were all that Tech needed to hand Anacostia its third loss in four starts, 23-2. Milo Quail went the route, allowing only six singles, while annexing his third series triumph against one set back.

Jackie Walsh and Jack Ray rapped out home runs to lead the Trainers. Walsh's circuit clout came with the bases loaded in the second and Ray's in the eighth with two on. Hugh Waller, Indian shortstop, made two of his team's six hits.

Run of Shad Expected at Chain Bridge

By Tom Moore McBride

Fishing for herring and white perch continues fair along the Potomac in the vicinity of Chain Bridge, but the runs seem to have slackened somewhat during the past week. Tomorrow, however, should show a pretty fine crop of victory food harvested from the rocky shores.

There are some good big shad on their way up the river, and there's a possibility they may have arrived in numbers by tomorrow. If they do, your best bet for taking them will be with either fly or bait casting rod and a very small spoon of silver finish.

The herring, incidentally, can be taken on either bait casting rod or cane pole and snag hooks, using a hard jerking retrieve with the bait casting outfit and a dipping and jerking motion with the cane pole.

This corner had hoped to take a swing around southern Maryland in the course of this week, to get a line on salt water conditions in the event the ban on the use of gasoline for spots fishing were lifted in the near future, but the new pleasure driving ban put a crimp in that and seems to indicate a gasoline situation so critical that there is little liklihood of resumption of gasoline for sports fishing.

Several boating and fishing organizations have been conferring with the OPA anent lifting of the sports gas ban on the ground that a large amount of food fish will not be caught this year. But unless there's a great swelling of gasoline supplies in the near future, the arguments they've presented probably will fall on barren soil.

The Maine News Service reports that if you own an outboard motor and have gasoline for it obtained prior to April 24 you may use it any time you wish. That interpretation was handed down by the Maine State OPA, and similar ruling probably will be issued soon by the Maryland and Virginia State boards.

Notes: You still can get to the Eastern Shore of Delaware, Maryland and Virginia by train and bus, and there are reports of striped bass, channel bass and a few weakfish being taken, along with the usual run of sharks, skates and other varmints . . . Anglers are still howling with glee over the character who got hung on a rock above Chain Bridge Wednesday and stood around for two hours—sure he had an extremely large fish on—before he finally broke his line . . . To get to the fishing at Chain Chain Bridge in these days of no pleasure driving, take the Glen Echo or Cabin John car and get off at stop 20 . . . There's no license required on either the District or Virginia shores of the Potomac up as far as Little Falls . . . Service Men's Club No. 1 took out another party of servicemen for a fishing jaunt Sunday and they had a swell time . . . They still can use more tackle for the servicemen, however. . . .

Johns Hopkins Wins Track Meet by Nose

Gets 68 1-3 Points to Catholics' 65½ In Mason-Dixon Contest; Loyola Third

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, May 7.—Nosing out Catholic University by less than three points, Johns Hopkins University won the annual Mason-Dixon Conference track and field meet here today.

Hopkins garnered 68 1/3 points to the 65½ points rolled up by Catholic, defending champion.

Loyola was third, with 33 2/3; Gallaudet fourth with 30¼, and Bridgewater with 23. American University with 2 and the University of Delaware, with one point, following in that order.

The only new meet record set was in the 220-yard dash, which Campanella, of Catholic, negotiated in 21.8 seconds. The old mark of 22 seconds flat was set last year by Pierce of Catholic.

Campanella also won the 100-yard dash by doing the distance in 9.8 seconds, and the broad jump with a leap of 20 feet 5½ inches.

Track Summaries

100-YARD DASH—Won by Campanella (Catholic University); second, Andriottis (Johns Hopkins); third, Clark (Loyola). Time, 9.8 seconds.

Wilson Track Stars Walk Off With Meet

Woodrow Wilson's crack track squad yesterday defeated, Tech, last year's interhigh champs, and Fairfax in a triangular meet held on the Tiger cinders. Wilson compiled 71 points to 59½ for the Trainers and 7½ for the Rebels.

Buddy Brewton, Wilson's big star, walked off with individual honors as he checked in with three firsts and a second. Brewton copped the 100-yard dash, the high and broad jumps, and was second in the 220. George Paul led Tech with 5-pointers in the shot and discus while Jackie McDonough claimed three of Fairfax's 7½ markers.

Coach Joe Carlo of Wilson uncovered a new sprint man in Phil Funk, Tiger football star. Frank placed second in the 100, which was the first time he had ever attempted the event. He also took second and third in the shot and discus respectively.

The results:

100-YARD DASH—First, Brewton (W.); second, Funk (W.); third, McDonough (F.); fourth, Piker (T.). Time, 0:10.5.

Landon Defeats Friends School, 8-1

Eastern Edges Gonzaga in Close Game, 7-6

Little Bucky Glorious, making his initial start for Eastern, yesterday twirled good ball for eight innings but had to be relieved in the ninth, as the Ramblers edged Gonzaga, 7-6, in a well-played game on the Eastern diamond. Elmer Raba pitched for the Eagles but lost when the Ramblers sent three runs across in the last half of the eighth.

Raba had not walked a man going into the fatal eighth, but his control went back on him as he gave two men free transportation. Freddy Seaton led off with his third hit, a solid rap to left. Sparrow worked the Eagle hurler for the first of these walks, and Ernie David singled, sending Seaton home. Edsel Martz here got the second walk, and Joe Artino also got his third hit, driving in Sparrow and David.

Gonzaga threatened in the ninth, but Stan Pohutsky relieved Glorious and put out the fire. Wilbur Osman hit a terrific home run for Eastern in the fourth to tie the game at one-all. Sparrow got Glorious out of a hole in the sixth when he streaked far to his left and made a brilliant one-handed catch of a sure hit to halt an Eagle rally.

St. Albans Beats Bethesda, 8-4

"Stout Steve" Cromwell yesterday hurled his second victory of the year, winning over Bethesda-Chevy Chase, 8-4, for St. Albans, in a slugfest played on the Saints' diamond. Cromwell was nicked for 11-hits, one more than St. Albans got, but was tough in the pinches to come out on top.

Two runs in the fifth gave St. Albans a 5-4 lead and three markers in the eighth put the tilt on ice for Cromwell. "Cotton" Smith, Buddy Cromelin and Jimmy Trimble led the Saints at bat with seven safeties between them. Trimble's triple was the big blow of the eighth frame.

National School Beats Devitt, 12-9

"Sunny Jim" Bottomley and "Spook" Yates yesterday pitched National Training School to a 12-9 victory over Devitt Prep in a game marred by the wildness of Prep's hurler, Bill Kramer. The festivities took place at National Training School but Devitt was the home team.

A very spotty performance was turned in by Kramer, who fanned 17 but lost the game due to his own wildness. He gave eight batters free transportation and hit five others while allowing only six hits. A four-run outburst in the eighth inning clinched the game for N. T. S.

Appling Scores Pitcher Humphries With One Out in Extra-Inning Game

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 7.—A long fly double to left center by Shortstop Luke Appling with one out in the tenth broke up an overtime hurlers' duel between Johnny Humphries and Hal White today and gave the Chicago White Sox a 1-to-0 decision over the Detroit Tigers in the opening game of their series.

Humphries scored the winning run himself after opening the overtime inning by drawing a walk and Outfielder Thurman Tucker sacrificed.

With unfavorable weather conditions a contributing factor, only 513 fans paid to see the game, the smallest crowd in Chicago in years.

Detroit made seven hits and Chicago six. The Tigers missed a chance to win in the ninth, when Frank Higgins, third baseman, doubled after Outfielder Rip Radcliff was intentionally passed. Higgins took a long lead off second and was trapped by Catcher Mike Tresh and Dick Culler, rookie White Sox third baseman.

Doolan Scores TKO in Hoyas' Ring Tourney

Six champions were crowned yesterday at the Hilltop as Georgetown University concluded its huge fistic tournament, feature of the enlarged physical fitness program.

Most spectacular match of the card of six final bouts was in the 155 pound class when Paul Doolan scored a technical kayo over R. A. Phillips in 1:34 of the first round. Referee Marty Gallagher stopped the bout when Phillips obviously could not continue under Doolan's two-fisted attack.

The results:

125-pound class, Bill Martin decisioned Semus Numan.

145-pound class, Tommy Abera decisioned Paul Fitzgerald.

Heavyweight class, Ollie Oja decisioned Jim Donnelly.

Lewis to Fight On Uline Card

Stoney Lewis, the You Street bombardier, who has been campaigning all winter at Turner's Arena, will make his first appearance in a Uline Arena setting next Wednesday night when he meets Lambertine Williams, Baltimore Negro middleweight, in the fourth of Promoter Goldie Ahearn's four 8 round bouts.

Stoney, who has lost only two matches during the past winter, losing to Howard Bennett when his shoulder slipped out of socket, and bowing to Oakie Green but later reversing the decision, has shown rapid improvement. In Williams, he will be meeting a rugged boy and a good puncher.

Feature eight on the card finds Frankie Wills, District welterweight champ, meeting Ernest (Cat) Robinson of New Jersey, a highly regarded boy who is an Armstrong type of fighter. Wills, by a victory, hopes to meet Armstrong here this summer. Other eight-rounders find Pedro Hernandez, who recently laced Carroll (Kid) Alexander, local featherweight, meeting Paullie Jackson, Philadelphia Negro, and Terry Gibson, stablemate and protege of Armstrong, facing Primo Flores of Puerto Rico.

Redlegs Edge Chicubs, 5-4; 'Vandy' Wins

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Ohio, May 7.—"Fireman" Joe Beggs came to the rescue of Johnny Vander Meer in the first half of the ninth inning today to allow the Cincinnati Reds to squeeze out a 5 to 4 triumph over the Chicago Cubs.

With two out and Cub runners on first and second, Manager Bill McKechnie retired his star left-hander and inserted Beggs, who caused Ed Stanky to force Stan Hack at second and end a threat after one run had crossed the plate.

The Reds went to work on Dick Barrett in their half of the first inning for two runs and added another in the third when Linus Frey, Cincinnati second baseman, rifled a triple to right center field and scampered home on Eddie Miller's single.

Jap Landings May Be Aimed At Changsha

By the Associated Press

Chungking, May 7.—Japanese landing on the southern shores of Tungting Lake only 50 airline miles from Changsha, capital of Hunan Province, were viewed today as indicating that a new Japanese drive on the capital was under way and with it the possibility of a determined attempt to crush free China.

The Chinese high command announced that the first landings of 7000 to 8000 troops were effected yesterday under cover of protecting planes. The enemy brought up reinforcements during the afternoon, the communique said, and fierce fighting was continuing today.

The drive, in its initial phases, could develop into an attempt to crush the great Central China city who name is associated with three enemy defeats, or an attempt to encircle the Chinese forces to the westward, enabling the invaders to ruin or seize the ripening rice crop in what are perhaps the highest producing regions of all China, these observers believed.

Changsha, while important in itself, is more important as the inevitable stepping stone to the Hengyang junction of the Canton-Hankow and Hunan-Kwangsi railways, one of the key areas in the whole of Free China.

Only yesterday an Army spokesman said that China was the most likely objective of any "important Japanese move."

Essen Families By Thousands Want to Leave

By Edwin Shanke
Associated Press Staff Writer

Stockholm, May 7.—Thousands of families in Essen have decided to move to other parts of Germany with all their remaining belongings as the result of the latest R. A. F. raids on the armaments center, it was disclosed in a copy of the Essener National Zeitung, which reached here today.

The information was contained in an article directing a second appeal for help from the entire Reich. The British Royal Air Force has dropped more than 10,000 tons of bombs on and near the Krupp Works at Essen, now the "most-bombed city in the world."

Lack of transport and a shortage of hands to pack furniture have caused such bottlenecks, the newspaper added, that it will require 140 days to move those whose applications already are on file.

It urged Esseners who want to move lock, stock and barrel to "be patient."

At the same time the National Zeitung described the extent of devastation in Essen it told those who are giving up their homes that they "will no longer have a claim after the war" and that postwar reconstruction will last so long that new houses will not be placed at their disposal.

"Those leaving now therefore are departing forever," the newspaper said.

First consideration is given to soldiers, who are given special leave in order to move their families, the paper said.

The newspaper complained about "chaos" in repairing partly damaged Essen homes because "persons with good connections" to the Nazi Party are receiving workers and building materials, both scarce, ahead of others.

Windsors' Cleric, Wife Held for Deportation Trial

By the Associated Press

Immigration authorities have arrested the Rev. Robert Anderson Jardine, cleric who married the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, and his wife, Maude Evelyn Jardine, at Los Angeles on a deportation warrant charging them with overstaying their time in this country.

A Justice Department official said that the Jardines entered the United States in February, 1938, from France on a temporary visa which expired in February, 1941. Jardine had applied for a renewal of the visa, this official said, but was turned down.

Mr. and Mrs. Jardine have been released without bond pending a hearing before an immigration inspector which will be held soon in Los Angeles, the Justice official said.

Strollers on Pennsylvania Avenue yesterday found themselves knee-deep in Department of Agriculture reports, right there on the street and sidewalk. A bale of them fell off a truck and startled passersby took home samples of "a report on final postmortem inspections of carcasses."

Double Rations

Spartanburg, S. C.—Imagine the surprise of a store cashier, looking at a customer's ration book, when he found it contained two complete sets of all A. B. C., etc., coupons.

"Where did you get such a book?" he asked.

The customer professed bewilderment. "Aren't they all like that?"

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Government Girls Celebrate Tomorrow

Ten weeks ago today there appeared in this column a letter signed "Government Girl" which said in part: "What do you think of the idea of Government employes, now that they have their pay raise, of contributing $1 each toward the purchase of a warplane to be named 'Government Girl'? I would be more than glad to send in my dollar and I'm sure thousands of others would be, too. The civilian employes here in Washington could set a good example for the rest of the Nation if they'd get together and buy a much-needed warplane with their own funds."

The response to that letter was unprecedented. Federal workers everywhere adopted the idea as their own. Dollars started to roll in before the campaign machinery could be set up. And you know the answer. Tomorrow afternoon at 3 p. m. on the Ellipse two sleek fightin' planes—the finest money can buy—will be turned over to the Army and the Navy. The planes will be fully equipped and they are being given as an outright gift to the services. The campaign for funds closed two weeks ago but the dollars keep coming in. More than $157,000 from about as many different Federal workers had been collected up to yesterday. The campaign is without parallel and it was the first time in history that Federal employes as a group had been asked to sponsor a project. The employes came through 1000 per cent.

Employes in every agency have gotten a thrill out of seeing the fund grow but no one has enjoyed it like Agnes Richardy, the Veterans Administration employe who inspired the campaign by writing the above letter. Tomorrow afternoon she'll turn the money collected over to Army and Navy representatives. Tomorrow will be her day and it'll see her dream come true. An interesting sidelight on Miss Richardy is the fact that she's an Italian-American, her parents having emigrated from Italy some years ago. The Veterans Administration honored Miss Richardy when it chose her as its representative on the guard of honor.

Christening ceremonies tomorrow afternoon are open to everyone. It makes no difference whether you were among those who contributed. The planes will be on the field and they may be inspected. The Army will be given a Mustang and the Navy will get a Corsair. Both are the newest and best types of fighter planes and tomorrow will be one of the few opportunities for Federal employes to get a good look at the kind of planes our boys are using to polish off the Axis. General H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces, and Rear Adm. Ralph E. Davidson of the Bureau of Aeronautics, will accept the fighting craft in behalf of the Army and the Navy. Army and Navy war heroes will tell the employes what the planes mean to them.

At least one girl from each agency will be in the guard of honor. The guard itself selected the two girls who'll christen the planes and they are Irene Leftcheck of the War Department and Edith Disney of the Federal Trade Commission. Miss Leftcheck, a Signal Corps employe, will be introduced to other War Department employes today at a meeting in Pentagon Auditorium. Employes in many agencies are organizing in groups to attend the christening. Army and Navy bands will hold a concert from 2 to 3 p. m.

Venereal Cases Found Alarming

D'Alesandro Says He's Been Startled By Reports of Conditions Here

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

Characterizing reports of venereal disease conditions in the District "startling and alarming," Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat) of Maryland, yesterday scheduled a hearing on the subject Wednesday at 11 a. m.

D'Alesandro, chairman of the subcommittee on public health of the House District Committee, has asked witnesses from the Provost Marshal's office of the War Department, as well as District authorities to appear before his committee.

Announcing the hearings D'Alesandro said: "The growing menace of the venereal disease situation in the District, particularly since we have so many members of the armed forces stationed here, must be brought to light. The public is entitled to the facts of the situation. We want to know what methods are being used by District authorities and military officials to combat this dangerous condition here.

"Startling" Reports

"Some of the reports which have reached me have been startling and alarming. If the facts are as I have been informed we cannot seek remedies too quickly."

D'Alesandro asserted that one of the most apparent needs here is a locked hospital for venereal disease cases. Funds for construction of such a hospital at Gallinger were granted months ago by the Federal Works Agency, but the War Production Board denied priorities for the construction.

Only recently Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, asserted that 24 venereal cases which should have been in a detention hospital had to be turned loose on the community because there was no place to put them.

To Call Maverick

D'Alesandro revealed that at a later date he would call Maury Maverick, chief of the governmental division of the War Production Board, to explain the WPB decision.

Among the officials summoned for Wednesday's hearing are Lieut. Col. J. A. Castell of the office of the provost marshal, War Department; Joseph Owen of Region Four, Office of Defense, Health and Welfare Services; Sergt. Roy Blick, vice squad, Police Department; members of the board of public welfare, the District Commissioners, Dr. Fred Gillick, District Health Department, and Ray Huff, director of public welfare and superintendent of the District penal institutions.

Meanwhile yesterday D'Alesandro added the name of Dr. Daniel L. Finucane, superintendent of Glendale Sanitorium, to the list of those who will appear Tuesday before his committee on the subject of tuberculosis in the District.

More Girls Expected to Get Stockings Out of Jug This Year

The heat of Washington's famed summers is due to result in one surprisingly large saving on Government girls' budgets—for the motif for the next four months is due to be painted legs from the Pentagon to the Social Security Building.

Employe counselors from a dozen Federal agencies report that one of the biggest difficulties of the Government worker's wardrobe is stockings—for although the rayons now available are durable and no more expensive than the silks and nylons of yesteryear, they are subject to snags and they present a laundry problem. Seems you must let rayons dry for 48 hours before donning them, which means that you require more pairs.

So leg makeup, which first came into vogue late in 1941 and achieved tremendous popularity last year, currently appears to be the rule, not the exception, for Washington's horde of feminine office workers.

From the masculine viewpoint, painted legs often are more attractive than be-stockinged ones, anyway. One male connoisseur pointed out that ersatz hose eliminates wrinkled ankles, baggy knees and wandering seams in one swoop—and, he pointed out, most legs look slimmer in makeup anyway.

The saving in actual dollars and cents to the overworked budget should be tremendous, the ladies claim. Where prices of good rayons hover close to $1 and often higher, 20-odd applications of Pseudo-stockings can be gotten from a single bottle of inexpensive makeup.

Chances are, however, that the exigencies of war may cut the supply of leg paint before the summer ends—the makeup, it seems, harbors a small percentage of alcohol, which comes under the heading of vital war materials.

Capital May Get Potatoes From South

Georgia, Alabama Shipment Expected Soon to Break Famine in Area

Black market operations in potatoes kept Washington from getting any spuds for the past several weeks, S. A. Freas, proprietor of the S. A. Freas Produce Co. said yesterday.

In addition he held out scant hope of the city getting any appreciable amount of the Hastings, Fla., crop which is scheduled to start arriving in the city May 19 as he said he had been informed shippers told him they had piled up as many as 5000 orders ahead.

There were 34 cars to move out of Alabama this week, but they were snapped up by the Army and the Southern market, he said.

Other Crops Ready

One bright ray in the otherwise dark picture was that the Georgia and Alabama crops are now ready to move in quantities and these spuds may break the famine.

The entire crop of red bliss potatoes, grown around Tampa, Fla., were taken by black market operators, who moved them north in trucks. Shipments in this manner could not be checked by the Food Distribution Administration, which keeps track of produce movements.

However, he said that few if any of these black-market potatoes reached this city as they also were disposed of on markets further south.

Black Market Prevails

That there is something of a black market here for potatoes is probable, he said, in that he had been offered 100 sacks by an out-of-town firm at above-ceiling-prices.

Washington dealers will not know until Monday what they may expect in the way of shipments of potatoes from Hastings, he said.

In addition to the famine in spuds there is a shortage of cabbage and lettuce in prospect for the weekend.

Ten in Service Send Corsage, Bonds to Mother in New York

SEEK SUGGESTIONS—A. F. C. Rita Van Coutren of the WAACS "eyes" the ads with Mrs. John S. Ralston for Mother's Day gift suggestions at the NCCS Women's Division Club, 1814 N Street Northwest. Rita is doing the shopping for her two WAAC sisters and herself, six brothers in the Navy and one in the Army.

WAAC Auxiliary Rita Van Coutren, now stationed at Bolling Field, has what is undoubtedly Washington's largest single shopping problem in preparation for the celebration of Mother's Day tomorrow.

Rita, who wears the single chevron of a first class private, has seven brothers and two sisters—and they are all in uniform. Their mother, Mrs. Emma Van Coutren, currently is in New York working in a department store to take the place Rita deserted to join the WAAC.

Because Rita, 22, is the youngest girl and furthermore the only member of the family stationed in a large city, the other nine have chosen her to do Mother's Day shopping for all of them. But a full-time job at Bolling Field is not very conducive to pounding F Street pavements—so Rita took her problem to Mrs. John S. Ralston, a hostess at the USO Club operated at 1814 N Street Northwest by the Women's Division of the National Catholic Community Service. Mrs. Ralston, with two sons, and a daughter in nurses' training, donates her services to the club four days each week.

Together they mapped their plans and late last night had decided that the most logical idea was to send Mrs. Van Coutren a corsage and nine war bonds.

The children range in ages from 20 to 37. Youngest is Victor, who is in the Navy; others are Vincent, Paul, John, Joseph and Cyril, likewise in the Navy, and Tommy, the lone Army representative among the boys. ("He was drafted," Rita explains.) All three girls are WAACS—Rita, Helen and Adine. Mrs. Van Coutren writes a daily letter to each.

Black Market In Poultry Flourishing

200,000 Pounds Of Illegad Fowl Sold Here in Week, Dealers Claim

By Linton Burkett
Post Staff Writer

Poultry dealers of Washington buying and selling only on legitimate markets yesterday revealed a check made by them showed approximately 200,000 pounds of black market chickens had been sold in the city during the past week.

In contrast they pointed out that they had been able to obtain but 9500 pounds for their customers at ceiling prices.

"Despite the fact there is a thriving black market here in chickens," a spokesman said, "I do not think many are making any considerable money. They are simply doing this to keep business alive."

The chickens are bought at above-ceiling prices from Eastern Shore of Maryland farmers, the spokesman said. These same farmers, he said, refuse to sell the birds to legitimate dealers who cannot pay more than 28½ cents a pound for live birds.

Still Seeking Evidence

Inspectors of the OPA have been trying vainly to obtain sufficient evidence against the dealers. Legitimate operators say they are confident of their facts but themselves admit their information might not stand the strain of a court test.

The retailer sometimes ignores ceiling prices, goes ahead and takes a chance by selling at a sufficiently high price to permit him to handle the birds profitably.

Maybe Short Weight

Or, maybe he gives short weight. In other words, he may bill a chicken weighing 3 pounds to a customer at the price he would get for a 4-pound bird.

Housewives report some dealers refuse to place the weight of the chicken on the sales slip and if it is demanded, refuse to deliver the chicken.

"There are plenty of chickens on the Eastern Shore," the dealers' spokesman said. "But, although I have enough money on deposit in Eastern Shore banks to buy all the chickens I can sell, I was unable to buy one single bird during the past week.

"The previous week I succeeded in getting 50,000 pounds of birds."

Another hindrance in the way of the housewife being able to buy legitimate birds is the fact that wholesalers are permitted to sell to restaurants and hotels at a price three-fourths of a cent a pound higher than they can sell to a retail dealer.

Chain Stores Have Advantage

Because they have facilities for processing them, the big chain stores can buy the live chickens at above ceiling prices and still sell them at retail ceilings because they can get the profit that customarily would go to the wholesaler and processer.

The result has been that the corner grocer is without chickens and the legitimate wholesaler is either without or having considerable difficulty getting birds.

Two of the largest wholesalers in the city yesterday were without a single chicken for sale to retailers today and had closed their doors.

Weekend Activities Expanded By USO to Benefit Servicemen

A variety of activities, from sight-seeing to roller-skating, will be available to men in uniform on leave in Washington this weekend.

In addition to the regular USO-sponsored programs, two dances for officers will be held this weekend; one under the auspices of the Officers' Service Club at the Mayflower Hotel, today at 9 p. m., and one sponsored by the Junior Council of the National Council of Jewish Women at the Hotel Fairfax, tomorrow at 8:15 p. m.

The first formal dance arranged by the USO for Negro service men and war workers will be tonight at 9 in St. Cyprian's Catholic Church, Thirteenth and C Streets Southeast. Music will be by the Negro American Legion Band. Registration of hostesses for the center will be held at the church tonight, 7 to 9.

Lieut. (j. g.) Frank Bavier Doty, 27, U. S. N. R. of 2003 North Thirteenth Street, Arlington, Va., and Aviation Cadet Nikodemus zog, 21, of Philadelphia, were killed yesterday when their training plane crashed off Route 1 South of Alexandria yesterday.

They were from Hyde Field, near Clinton, Md. The crash occurred about 4:45 p. m.

The cause of the crash has not yet been determined.

Club Holds Election

Miss Marian Mortimer was elected president of the Young Women's Club of First Congregational Church at this week's meeting, which was followed by a style show in which the members participated.

Government Girl Buys Bonds for 4 Service Kin

LEAGH LESSO

Leagh Lesso, 2628 Woodley Place Northwest, an account clerk in the National Housing Agency, has four brothers in the Army, another brother off for the Navy next week, and four brothers-in-law in the Army and Marine Corps, and she's backing them up by buying a bond every payday through the Government Payroll Savings Plan.

Miss Lesso, one of 13 children, had a definite answer when asked about her nationality: "My mother was Irish and German and my father Czecho-Slovakian and Russian, but we are all Americans now," she said, and added, "If you need a soapbox salesman to go out and preach the gospel of the advantages of buying war bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan, you can count on me."

Eight per cent of their gross salaries are being invested in war bonds by 83½ per cent of the National Housing Agency employes.

Navy Casualties Total 24,923

The Navy announced yesterday three casualties in Navy forces, including two dead and one missing.

In addition, one name was listed whose status changed from missing to safe, and one name was listed whose status changed from missing to dead.

This brings to 24,923 the total of Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard casualties reported to next of kin since December 7, 1941. The grand total includes 7,190 dead, 4,664 wounded and 13,069 missing.

Legendre Promoted

Maj. Leonce R. Legendre, executive director for U. S. Civilian Defense Coordinator John Russell Young was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel yesterday. The promotion was made upon the recommendation of Maj. Gen. John T. Lewis, commander of the Military District of Washington.

Lieut. Col. Legendre entered the local civilian defense organization on March 4, 1942, as assistant to Col. Lemuel Bolles, whom he succeeded as Young's executive director on February 1, 1943.

Pupils 'Raise' 7 Jeeps

In four short days of intensive bond-selling, pupils of the John R. Francis Junior High School raised $6865, or enough to give the Army seven new jeeps.

The achievement was celebrated yesterday with a ceremonial jeep christening. Presented to the United States Army, the jeeps emerged from the christening as "The Spirit of Francis," "The Brunson, Brown, McCoy," "The Dorie Miller," "The Crispus Attucks," "The John R. Francis," "The A. E. Litchman," and "The Sarah E. Mason."

Speakers were Dr. E. F. Harris, president of the Federation of Civic Associations; Dr. C. Herbert Marshall, president of the Rock Creek Civic Association, and Lieut. Col. Campbell C. Johnson, president of the Home and School Association.

Students who took part were Eulah Richerson, Student Council president, as mistress of ceremonies; James Bruce, senior class president; Harold Crockett, Mildred Jones, John Coleman, Cordelia Kenney, Bennie McCoy, Doris Coates, Joseph Walker, Mamie Wade, Joseph Brass, Omeda Williford, Ernush Spencer, Mary Lockett, Melvin Sheffield, Mildred Tinner, Herbert Ross, Janice Pryde and John Edwards.

Rites Honoring Leonard Set Wednesday

High-ranking clergy and laymen of all faiths and Government leaders have been invited to memorial services here Wednesday for Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, Washington Methodist resident prelate, who died in a plane crash in Iceland this week while touring the fighting fronts for American Protestantism.

With members of the bishop's family attending, the services will take place at 2:30 p. m. at Foundry Methodist Church, Sixteenth and P Streets Northwest, where the prelate held membership.

Other Services Planned

Meanwhile, plans are also being made for memorial services for Col. Frank L. Miller, aid to Bishop Leonard, and Maj. Robert H. Humphrey, chaplains, who were killed in the same crash. The date for those services has not been announced, but they will be held in Georgetown Presbyterian Church, for Colonel Miller, and at Centenary Methodist Church, Lynchburg, Va., for Major Humphrey.

Participants in the Bishop Leonard service will include Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, host pastor and Senate chaplain; Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, Bishop Leonard's predecessor as resident bishop here; Bishop Lester H. Smith of Cincinnati and prelate of the Ohio Methodist Conferences.

Also present will be representatives of the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains, of which Bishop Leonard was chairman and as whose representative he made the trip abroad; the Federal Council of Churches, the Servicemen's Christian League, the Methodist Commission on Chaplains, of which he was chairman; the cabinets of the Baltimore Conference Districts over which the prelate presided, and others.

Relatives To Attend

Relatives who will attend the bishop's memorial service will be Mrs. Louella Day Leonard, the widow; a son, Adna W. Leonard, jr. of Pittsburgh; a daughter, Mrs. Phyllis Day Leonard Budd, wife of an Ithaca (New York) Methodist minister, and several grandchildren.

Bishops of the northeastern jurisdiction, of which Washington is a part, will meet in the near future to consider a successor to Bishop Leonard, it was learned yesterday. Meanwhile, the Washington resident bishop's duties are being handled through Bishop Francis J. McConnell, bishop of the New York area, Methodist Church.

Protest, Parade Mark Transit Work Request

Speakers in Franklin Park last night assailed the Capital Transit Co. for its failure to hire Negro bus and trolley drivers, climaxing a parade from Tenth and T Streets Northwest to Franklin Park, Fourteenth and I Streets.

The Negro Elks' band headed the line of marchers. At the beginning there were not more than 200 in the line, but groups joined them on the way downtown, and at Massachusetts Avenue the police counted 814 marchers.

Marching with the protestants were high police officials, led by Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police. Commissioner John Russell Young was among the spectators at Franklin Park.

Among the organizations participating were the National Negro Congress, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the League of Women Shoppers, United Federal Workers Association, C. I. O.

Speakers included: Rep. Veto Marcantonio (Labor Party) New Work; Joe Phillips, United Federal Workers Local 203; Leighton Williams, A. F. L. Hotel and Restaurant local; Doxey A. Wilkerson, professor of sociology, Howard University; the Rev. W. H. Jernagin, president of the Federal Council of Negro Churches in America; Bernard C. Chapman, chairman of the Committee for Negro Employment of the Capital Transit Co.

George Barr Dies; Pan American Union Gardener

George W. Barr, 65, of 4444 Seventeenth Street North, Arlington, Va., keeper of the Pan American Union's tropical gardens, died Wednesday evening at his home. His death occurred on the eve of the day that the gardens were again to be visited by a Latin American dignitary, the Bolivian President, Enrique Penaranda.

Mr. Barr has been chief gardener of the Pan American Union for 16 years, during which time thousands of high ranking visitors had congratulated him on his care of "the show place of Washington."

He is survived by his wife, Mettie, two daughters, Mrs. Marjorie Clow of Syracuse, N. Y., and Mrs. Esta Eichliter of Fredericksburg, Va. Also surviving are three sons, Zelnas Barr of Hyattsville, Md., and Leslie and Alvin Barr both of Arlington.

Burial will follow funeral services at 1:00 p. m. tomorrow in Detrick, Va.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

The Elephant's Foot

She—How do you like it?

He—Like what?

She—My new hat, of course. You never notice anything I have on.

He—I saw it the minute you came in.

She—Why didn't you say something?

He—What was there to say? It looks all right.

She (eagerly)—You really think it's becoming?

He—It's a very nice hat . . . Say, I see here where they've raided Kiska again.

* * * *

She—But is it becoming to me?

He—I just told you it looked all right on you . . . Now if they'd driven the Japs out in the first place as I said——

She—I don't believe you like this hat.

She—But I don't want a sensible hat!

He—For heavens' sake! What other kind would you want?

She—Well, the saleswoman said this was a very smart hat.

He—They'll tell you anything.

She—Then you don't think it's a smart hat?

He—Oh, yes! It's a very well-made conservative hat.

She—Conservative! I don't want a conservative hat!

He—Why not? You're not a young girl any more.

She—But the saleswoman said this made me look very young.

He—She WOULD say that.

* * * *

She—But tell me honestly—do you really like it on me?

He—Yes, yes, yes! . . . Now the whole point about the Aleutians——

She—Are you sure you like it?

He—I've told you so half a dozen times.

She—I don't believe you like the shape.

He—It's a very wonderful shape.

She—Now you're making fun of me!

He—Well of all the—say, I'm not going to say another word about that hat!

She—Well, I knew you didn't like it! You never like anything I get.

He—I tell you it's ALL RIGHT!

She—Well, you needn't swear at me.

He—I'm not swearing at you! But when I say a thing's all right I mean it, and yet you come asking me half a dozen times the same question. Just like a woman!

The Lion's Purr

She—O-o-h! So you've got it! It looks marvelous!

He—You really like it?

She—It makes you look just like Anthony Eden!

He—Huh! huh! huh! Now none of that. What I want to know is—do you think it's a good hat?

She—It has a very aristocratic look.

He—Well, the man who sold it to me said it was an exceptionally good hat.

She—It really has class—it looks wonderful on you.

He—Just feel that felt, will you?

She—That IS good felt.

* * * *

He—And look at that binding—and that band!

She—It IS well made. Put it on again . . . No, set it further forward.

He—The fellow who sold it—he said there wouldn't be any more felt that good.

She—No, put it more to one side . . . there, that's better. Really, you look so distinguished.

He—Huh, huh, huh! What I want to know is do you really think it's a good hat?

She—It's a wonderful hat. The shape is very good on you . . . Wait, snap the brim down a little more.

He—This fellow said this hat would be good for the duration.

She—I expect so—wait, it's a little too far forward.

* * * *

He—You really like it?

She—I'm crazy about it. The color's very good on you.

He—Just hold it and see how light it is. That's really good felt.

He—You really think it's a good buy?

She—Oh, I'm sure of it. Now walk out so I can see you from a distance.

He—This fellow said he had only two or three of these hats left. You see it's really good felt.

She—Yes indeed. It's really a good investment.

He—That's what this fellow said . . . And so you really think it's a good hat? . . .

To a young thing who cannot fool her mother:

One of the best ways to wangle a new dress is to give some good reasons why you should have it. Incidentally we do not include any "Just because . . ." in that category. Who knows, but if you show good judgment about your own wardrobe now, you might rate a clothes allowance next autumn.

The first thing to think about when you see a dress you want is "For what would I wear this, and how would I feel in it?" Comfort is the chief mainstay of poise, and with summer just around one corner of the Pentagon, that means keeping cool. You also have to consider how well your choice can stand up to the cleaning problem. Cotton answers on both counts and is undoubtedly your best bet. The styling of cotton dresses this year makes them fun as well as sensible (show you are above flinching at the sound of this word).

Take the dress on our apple-nibbler. It is made of striped cotton with solid color pleated ruffling. There's a swooshingly full skirt . . . eye-catcher on roller-skates. Because of the front buttons it is such a cinch to iron, you can safely volunteer to do it yourself (if that isn't bait we'll eat it). Soft summery colors. Sizes 9 to 15 . . . About $8.00.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

With the food scarcity, rationing and high prices, you might think there is not much use in trying to make the diet measure up to the nutrition yardstick. But shortages of food must not mean lower nutrition standard. To counterbalance the shortages we will have to apply the science of nutrition to meal planning as never before.

By careful planning, we can avoid the dietary deficiencies that might arise. England has been through this ahead of us and the experience there should be a great help. In general, the nutrition reports are favorable and it is recognized that they have done a very efficient job in handling the food situation. Nevertheless, as pointed out in the British Medical Journal and reported in our nutrition reviews, some dietary deficiencies have shown up after the three years of war. We must work to avoid these, and knowing what to expect should guide us.

For one thing, there is evidence of a vitamin C deficiency. The richest sources of this vitamin are the citrus fruits and tomatoes, and they are not always easy to get. Even during the past winter, it was hard for us to stretch a limited budget for liberal amounts of oranges and grapefruit. The chances are that it will be more difficult next year because it looks as though a large part of the supply will be reserved for direct war requirements.

Those of us who have victory gardens can guard against a vitamin C shortage by planting tomatoes and canning them. They tell us that tomatoes are easy to grow. They will ripen better if the plants are tied to good, sturdy stakes as they grow. To get bigger tomatoes, pinch off the sideshoots as they appear. Fortunately, the acid content of tomatoes makes them easy to can. They can be safely canned by the boiling hot water method.

When there is a shortage of any food, every source of the essentials it contributes becomes important. Fresh strawberries, raw cabbage, apples, parsley, green pepper and potatoes cooked in their jackets all furnish some of this vitamin.

Reports show an increase of rickets in England, particularly among breast-fed babies whose mothers had not received vitamin D. We have plenty of codliver oil and there should be no rachetic babies here.

Since the start of the war in England, the hemoglobin level among women and children has dropped. So that won't happen here, we should make better use of the meat organs because these glandular meats are high in available iron. Give the family liver loaf, beef and kidney stew or pie, braised, stuffed heart, and brains scrambled with eggs. Serve these meat organs a couple of times a week. They are all good. It is the homemaker who clings to the familiar and popular meats that are high in points who is most apt to sell her family short on nutrition.

And serve a green leafy vegetable, a green salad, and whole grain bread and cereal every day. And try to give each member of the family an egg a day. All these foods are high in minerals and vitamins.

We are going to have to apply nutrition all along the line to prevent deficiencies. By doing that, we can actually raise our standard in spite of all the shortages.

MEMO TO MISS BROWN

SUBJECT:

Nobody's Home Town

When is a home town not a home town? Apparently, when it is Washington. Plenty of people have lived in this fair city for three, six or twenty years and still think of it as a temporary place of rest. "My home is in Punxatawny," most anyone is likely to say after a decade of residence in Washington.

It's true that a lot of us have duration jobs; but one year is enough to entitle us to the benefits of the city's public and private agencies and certainly one year should suffice to give us a citizen's interest in what goes on.

Did you know that Washington's government is unique? Do you know how many Commissioners there are and, more important, who gives them their jobs? A fine thing! This is beginning to resemble a quiz program—which can easily baffle experts such as you.

Do you know what the District Health Department has to offer? Well, there is a Hospital Permit Bureau which accepts applications of persons who need hospital or sanatorium care and have no money to pay for it. (And this very possibly might be you, come unexpected appendicitis.) This bureau arranges for hospitalization in Gallinger Municipal Hospital or Glenn Dale Sanatorium on a part-payment or even free basis for those who are really bankrupt. For such improvident ones as us, the bureau may work out a plan of payment after hospitalization begins. In any event, no one need suffer from complications just because he (or she) spent two precious days trying to touch his friends and enemies for the needed cash before going to the hospital.

The Health Department also operates a chest clinic where free examinations and X-rays are given to those who suspect that they have tuberculosis, if, of course, the patient cannot afford to pay for an X-ray elsewhere. Southwest Health Center provides clinic treatments for more diseases than you can shake a stick at and there are a number of prenatal and postnatal care clinics in the city (usually in public school buildings).

There are innumerable private agencies set up to give advice and, in some cases, emergency financial aid in case of health problems. There's a Heart Association, Tuberculosis Association, Social Hygiene Society, Family Service Association, Health Security Administration, Society for the Prevention of Blindness and many, many others.

There's also an Instructive Visiting Nurse Society which provides nurses for those who don't need full-time nursing care but would benefit by a daily visit. This is something to remember, next time you're miserably sick in your boarding-house room. The fee is $1.25 a visit and, for those who cannot afford it, special arrangements are made.

Another agency well worth consideration is the Legal Aid Bureau. This one provides consultations, clinic style, with lawyers who give advice on your legal difficulties. If you merely want the name of a lawyer whose fees are not prohibitive, or who specializes in something or other, get in touch with the D. C. Bar Association and they will probably be able to suggest several you'd like.

If you don't know of a doctor (specialist or general practitioner) the Medical Bureau of the D. C. Medical Society will suggest three of any type you describe. They'll also send along a nearby doctor in case of emergency. The D. C. Dental Society will also suggest several dentists if you are at a loss to know where your next denture is coming from.

Another public enemy—and one you know quite a bit about, probably—is the District Recreation Department. This one conducts all sorts of activities at Central, Roosevelt, Dunbar and many other high schools each evening for warworkers and soon will start a summer program of outdoor sports.

Your Figure Madame!

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The glaring and tragic success of the Germans in their education for hatred of all but the "master race," ought to apprise all of us how easy it is to teach either hatred or love, either prejudice or appreciation.

The mind of a child is a sponge to soak up attitudes. Long before there is any capacity to think things out for himself the child may have become the repository of all the accumulation of prejudices and hatreds which the parents have been collecting. These attitudes and opinions may remain active long after the child has reached the age of reason or has had information and knowledge which should dispel them. It is hard to shake off feelings one has acquired about anything and everything.

This is one reason why prejudices against people, against races, religions, skin color, hair types, shapes of noses, etc., remain almost constant from generation to generation.

It is easily conceivable that the caricatures of the teeth of Japs would make "buck teeth" disliked for generations. These are emotions which might remain long after the source of them had been forgotten.

Mrs. A. M. wonders if a mother could instill hatred in the mind of a 4½-year-old child. "This is my godchild and I loved him very much and he loved me. This last summer his mother and I had words and since then none of the children has looked at me. The little one pouts and makes faces when he sees me. My neighbor says she doesn't think a child of this age could hold a grudge and that what was said to the child would go in one ear and out of the other. What do you think?"

The probability is that the child neither loved you nor hates you now, but is merely acting according to the dictates of a very silly, petty mother. If you would get to see the child again under amiable circumstances, his feelings would probably be the same toward you. But a continuous education of dislikes for you, would be effective eventual.

Mrs. E. M. K. makes a comment in a nice letter which fits well into this discussion. "Any person who thinks, knows that hate is bred in the cradle. What a tragic pity that much suffering could not be spared by having a true Christian feeling of good will toward all men. I want to say bravo for your own fine, open-minded attitude toward prejudice, Mrs. Eldred, as evidenced in some of your past articles."

Our leaflet on, "Early Discipline," may be had by parents wondering how to discipline the small child. It may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Baby Talk . . .

By Marianne

Statistics show that the number of younger fry in our population is rapidly on the increase. Whether your baby is just discovering the magic of a rattle or is reaching the why-where-how stage, it's time to be giving some thought to lightening the strain of summer days ahead.

If you make a game of "mix-and-match," your child will love dressing. The well-dressed young man will wear a cool, comfortable suit of soft cotton knit with detachable suspenders. It's particularly smart in gray with red and blue trim. Sizes 1 to 6. $1.79.

You can also get a matching shirt, cardigan, cap and socks.

The two young ones above are wearing the kind of play clothes that are fine for helping dig the victory garden or just to wear around the house. The suspender slacks at the right are made of seersucker—beloved by mother too because they won't have to be ironed! $1.25 and $1.65. Sizes 2 to 6.

The suspender shorts at the left are made of striped cotton. They come in red and white, blue and white, and green and white. Sizes 2 to 6. $1.49.

Nursery Kit for Baby

It's a simple matter to take baby with you when she has her own nursery kit containing all of the essentials! This simulated leather kit holds one waterproof sheet, a bib, pants, baby jar set and a few other items. Shaped just like your weekend cosmetic box, it's easy to carry. (A nice present for a shower, too.) $5.95.

A Gadget With a Purpose

An excellent item is this blanket clasp for bbay's bed. There's no need to worry that the covers won't stay on baby if you use these elastic and metal clasps that attach from the blanket to the side of the crib. A find for 79c.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

It might be a good idea for us to try one of the streamlined meals that the British get along on these wartime days. We would then appreciate that we have infinitely more food items at our disposal than our Allies.

Martha Ellyn

The simplicity of the menu served at the British War Relief Society luncheon at the Statler Hotel on Thursday did not detract from the good flavor of the food. Why not try out their menu and learn that a simple meal of the kind served at this occasion is very appealing? Here is the menu that was served:

British Luncheon Menu

Vegetable Hot Pot
Watercress-Lettuce Salad
Whole Wheat Rolls
Apple Charlottee Demitasse

The rolls served were made of whole wheat flour to imitate the British national bread. Whole wheat rolls are a delightful and nutritious addition to a meal. The recipes for the vegetable hot pot and apple Charlottes and whole wheat rolls follow:

VEGETABLE HOT POT

Soak 1 ounce beans overnight. Prepare and cut up the following vegegables: ¼ pound mixed vegetables (turnips, carrots, etc.,) and ½ pound potatoes. Place the vegetables in a pie dish or casserole. Cover with ¼ pint stock or water in which milk and 1 teaspoon vegetable yeast extract have been blended. Season. Place sliced potatoes on top. Cover with a lid or greased paper and cook until tender, ½ to ¾ of an hour. Sprinkle with 2 tablespoons chopped parsley just before serving. One portion.

APPLE CHARLOTTE

Line a greased mold with slices of stale bread, ¼ inch thick, dipped into or brushed with melted butter. The slices should fit close together and may even overlap. Fill the center with stewed tart apples, mashed and seasoned with sugar, nutmeg and chopped almonds or almond flavoring. Cover the top with slices of bread, buttered, and bake in hot oven, 400 F., for 30 minutes. The bread should have the appearance of being toasted and should be well browned. Turn out on a platter and serve hot.

WHOLE WHEAT ROLLS

Add ¼ cup sugar or 1-3 cup molasses and 2 tablespoons salt to 2 cups scalded milk. Increase molasses to 2-3 cups if desired, increasing flour as needed. Cool and when lukewarm add 1 yeast cake which has been dissolved in ¼ cup lukewarm water and 4 2-3 cups coarse whole wheat flour or half bread flour. Beat well, cover and let rise to double in bulk. Again beat and turn into greased muffin pans, having pans half full. Let rise and bake in a 325 to 450 degree oven, about 40 more minutes, or until done. Brush the rolls with melted fat three minutes before taking from oven if a more tender crust is desired.

Women's Club News

By Genevieve Reynolds

Mothers get the spotlight tomorrow in the club as well as personal realm. Three events will honor mothers—American War Mothers 19th annual Mothers' Day Service, Iota Gamma Phi national sorority's tea and the Nursery Committee of the Volunteers of America Mothers' Day Silver Tea.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

What with the war, no doubt the War Mothers' ceremony, 12:30 p. m. at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in the Amphitheater, Arlington Cemetery, will take on special significance. Perhaps many a mother will be wondering if her son will be among the unknown in this conflict. Others will give thanks that their sons weren't among the missing in World War I.

For the past 10 years, Iota Gamma Phi has held a tea honoring the mothers of its members. This tradition is being carried on with the event tomorrow, 2:30 to 5:30 p. m. at the Statler Hotel. Judge Ellen K. Raedy of the District Muncipal Court will be guest speaker. The president, Miss Gloria Lubar, and other officers will give welcoming speeches.

A musical program directed by Eva Whitford Lovette will highlight the program of the Valunteers of America's Mothers' Day tea 4 to 7 p. m. at the Free Day Nursery, 1525 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

Chairman of the program is Mrs. Vernon Cleaver. Assisting her are Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, Mrs. Walter O. Ulrey, Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, Mrs. Franklin G. Sartwell.

Did You Know That . . .?

Without fanfare, the NATIONAL LEAGUE OF AMERICAN PEN WOMEN closed the season with a luncheon meeting Tuesday at the Willard Hotel. Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson gave a streamlined report of the organization's activities and called attention to the fine contribution being made to promotion of war work by league members. For instance, many are slanting their writings—prose, poetry and drama—also art—to emphasize various phases of war work. Mrs. Rosamond Gaydash, national art chairman, reported that many pen leaguer's paintings had been donated for prizes in war bond rallies or used for decorations of servicemen's recreation rooms.

More than 200 new members have joined the league this year, according to Mrs. Bertha Shanks Chaney, membership chairman.

Out-of-town guests at the meeting included Mrs. Francesca Falk Miller, who announced her candidacy for the 1944 presidency; Mrs. William R. Norton, president of the Philadelphia Branch; Mrs. Lilla Wood Daniels of Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. Lulu Gable Giese, Sewickley, Pa.; Mrs. Blanche Smith Ferguson, Mrs. Edmund Boone Luckett, Mrs. Francis J. Parran and Mrs. Florence Kahn, all of Baltimore.

Broadening its scope of activity, the JUNIOR LEAGUE of Washington is becoming a war as well as a welfare organization, according to Mrs. John Jay O'Connor, chairman of the women's division, District of Columbia War Savings Committee. "Cooperation of the Junior League has been magnificent. Every member is carrying on some sort of war job," she explained, "in addition to her welfare work—not the least of these being with the women's division."

For the first time in its history, ST. PAUL'S ACADEMY (1400 Block V Street Northwest) now has a mothers' club to work out with the teachers the vital problems of the child's education. Organized recently the club elected Mrs. James W. Brockwell president.

Others named to serve with her were Mrs. Chris Malone, first vice president; Sister M. Rose Estelle, second vice president; Mrs. Donald Ketchum, third vice president; Mrs. Raymond E. Schmidt, recording secretary; Mrs. Garyton Echols, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Edward Hickey, treasurer; Mrs. Joseph P. Boylan, hospitality chairman, and Mrs. Frederic B. Tuttle, publicity chairman.

Doings of the Day

Col. John Donelson Chapter, D. A. R. holds luncheon 1 p. m., followed by annual business meeting and election of officers, at the home of Mrs. Moreland, 1506 North Ivanhoe, Arlington, Va. . . . Senior High Girl Reserves (40 from all the city's senior high schools) attending spring conference at Y. W. C. A. Vacation Lodge, Cherrydale Va. . . . State Officers, D. C. D. A. R., holds annual spring luncheon 1:30 p. m., at the Washington Club, 1701 K Street Northwest. Guest speaker is Mrs. Millicent Todd Dingham, author and lecturer. Mrs. Donald Earle, president, presides.

One Summer's Romance

BY RITA HANSEN

CHAPTER VI

"You're a darling! When you look so serious and sweet, I . . . " His hand went up to tousle the curls at the back of her neck. She stiffened and at the same instant felt his hand grow tight, drawing her face down to his.

"Mr. Bradford!" she said, and it was a whisper because his face was so close. His eyes were like two spots of fire as they moved over her face igniting her cheeks, but she didn't struggle.

He whispered, "I never knew you could really hear a person's heart beat when they were frightened. I hear yours." And then he released her with a quick grin. "I wasn't going to kiss you. Fortunately, I remembered the big handsome bank clerk in time."

"Mr. Bradford . . . " she said again, but he cut her short.

"For Pete's sake, call me Johnny. That won't hurt anybody, will it?"

It was sunset when they got to the house. All the lights were on and Johnny stopped and stared with an angry frown. A long car was parked beside his under the box-elder tree and there was the sound of a phonograph record on the breeze. Lisa saw two people laughing together on the porch. One of them waved to Johnny. He said something under his breath and dropping her hand, walked swiftly ahead of her to the house.

Lisa watched Johnny stride up to the porch and stop dead when a slim, dark-haired girl in tennis shorts threw her arms about his neck. "Darling!" the girl said caressingly. Her voice was soft and yet as ringing as a perfectly cast bell. "Darling, what a clever place to hide! I thought we'd never find you!"

Simon Golde came bustling up, worried and heated. "Johnny, I didn't tell them. Honest! I knew you wanted to be alone! I tried to keep them from coming!"

Johnny looked at his agent coldly and disentangled the dark girl. "I won't say I'm glad to see you, Julie, because I'm not. I'm trying to write a play, you know."

"Oh, but baby," she pouted, "we knew you must be dying of boredom up in this awful old place and we came up to save you!" She noticed Lisa then, standing at the foot of the porch stairs, holding the picnic basket in front of her. "Well, well, look what attractions there are in the country! Maybe you weren't as bored as I thought, Johnny!" Lisa flushed under the harshness of the dark eyes.

Johnny turned and said briefly, "This is Miss Alden, who takes care of the house. We've just been having a picnic."

Lisa smiled and walked past them, but she didn't escape without hearing Goldie say, "A distraction, I knew she'd be! Picnics! And how much work have you done, Johnny?"

As she stepped through the front door, she saw that there were three more people in the living room and she stopped in confusion. It didn't seem like the same room, for it was wreathed in tendrils of smoke, the precious rug that had come from China on a clipper ship was pushed back against a wall and there was a portable radio and a thing that looked like a portable bar. A very large, lemon-haired lady was dancing with a young man in the loudest sport jacket Lisa had ever seen. And the second man was sprawled on the big chair, singing lazily with the radio.

She said one small surprised, "Oh!" and they saw her. The lady waved a hand and smiled vaguely and the young man in the chair sprang up and laid aside his glass.

"Aha, a woman!" he said, "At last! Whoever you are, I'm willing to dance with you. Come on!" And there she was swung into the center of the floor, breathless and protesting.

"Please," she said, "I shouldn't be dancing with you. I've got work to do!" She slipped away from him and out into the kitchen. He called something after her but she kept going. She had hoped to find Effie in the kitchen. Instead she found the remains of an impromptu meal, several sticky glasses, one broken in the sink and a brown puddle on the stove where the coffee had boiled over. She checked the beginnings of an angry sob in her throat. It wouldn't do any good to get mad about things. And then Johnny came in.

"What I want to know," he scowled, "is how they trailed me up here! Unless Julie wormed it out of Golde somehow. Listen, how are we going to get rid of them?"

"I'm trying to figure out how I can make any supper for them," Lisa answered. Effie is bringing the Sunday groceries back from town. There's nothing here."

He looked about the kitchen with distaste. "They leave a trail like a pack of locusts. Don't worry. I'll take them out somewhere for dinner. Only try and get some place for them to sleep. Some nice place—like the chicken coop, maybe."

Lisa noticed that the irritated, tense lines around his eyes had come back again. This afternoon he had lost them. But now the afternoon was gone. Johnny seemed to have forgotten it already. He turned on his heel and stalked out and she began her job of cleaning up. The radio and the laughter got louder and the young man who had danced with her came out to look for ice cubes.

"Where do you hide the darn things?" he asked plaintively. "I looked all over the place when we came."

"We don't have any refrigerator," Lisa said. "There aren't any ice cubes."

"No ice-cubes! Wow, this is really the wilderness, good and solid. Are you a native up here?"

"Yes," Lisa stopped to look at him. "Are you surprised that I wear shoes?"

"Not at all. You're not bad."

"Thank you,' Lisa said as flatly as she could.

"Im Huck. What's your name?"

"Lisa. Before she could stop herself, she said, "Who's that girl . . . the one they call Julie?"

He smiled wisely. "Cute, huh? She's after Johnny tooth and nail. Either he's got to marry her or give her the lead in his next play. Preferably both."

"What's her name?"

"You really don't know? That's Julie Brent, late of Hollywood, until the circles under her eyes got too big." Lisa had heard of Julie Brent; even seen her a few times in the movies. And she read somewhere that Julie had grown tired of Hollywood and had gone back to her first love, the stage. Huck said, "The blonde is Inez Harrington, nice doll, lots of money. That's her boy friend, Lee, somebody or other. Never could remember his last name. How about dinner tonight?"

"What?" Lisa said, thrown off balance by his sudden question. Then, understanding that he wanted a date, she said, "Thank you, but I couldn't. I'm working here, you know."

"That's all right, he said gallantly. "I don't mind what you are. I'm democratic about things like that."

After that things got worse and worse. Johnny did drive all of them down to a restaurant on the highway for dinner, leaving her a couple of hours to straighten up, but she couldn't undo all the damage. It made her want to cry, when she saw the crack in her great grandmother's little willow rocker. Everybody had laughed so hard at the look on Inez's face when it broke. And the prized cherrywood table was stained with glass marks and dulled with a film of ashes. When she heard the two cars coming back up the road she ran out the back way to Effie's and left the house to them.

Cousin of King, Noted Artist Opens Exhibit Here Tomorrow

as seen through her own eyes in this recent self-portrait of the visiting Yugoslav artist.

Milena, Outstanding Painter, Is House Guest Of Yugoslav Ambassador and Mme. Fotitch

By Patricia Grady

"Emotionally, I am Serbian; intellectually, I am international."

Milena Pavlovitch Barilli, known to the art world as Milena, described the background that has made her acclaimed as one of the world's outstanding contemporary painters. In Washington for a one-man exhibit of paintings and drawings at the Corcoran Gallery of Art, this distinguished artist is the house guest of the Yugoslav Ambassador and Mme. Fotitch.

Following the opening of her exhibit tomorrow afternoon, Milena will be the guest of honor at a 6 to 8 o'clock cocktail party to be given by her diplomatic hosts at the Yugoslav Embassy on R Street. She will stay in the Capital—which she considers "a wonderful rest because it lifts the spirits"—until the end of the showing on May 23.

Born in Serbia of aristocratic stock—she is a cousin of King Peter of Yugoslavia—Milena started her formal painting education at the age of 11. She was instantly hailed as a prodigy and began to take first prizes in art schools all over Europe. Early exposed to abstractionism and modern techniques, Milena painted quickly and easily, averaging two paintings a day in her early years.

Hard Way Is Easier

Then came a reaction against abstracts, and a long siege in Paris working out her own artistic salvation. She now works very carefully, spends long periods on one painting. "I found in the long run the hard way was the easy way for me," she comments.

Specializing in portraits—an impressive list of the world's great have posed for her—Milena has developed an unusual technique. Her work combines the aspects of medieval church art and modern composition.

Young, with her black hair swept into a high pompadour, her large, dark eyes set off by fair skin, Milena looks like the artist she is. Imaginative, she speaks in precipitative phrases, grows restrainedly emotional when she talks of her native country and the mother of whom she has had no word.

Milena came to New York from her Paris studio in the fall of 1939 for a brief visit. World events dictated her stay. Her latest exhibits have been in New York and at Sweet Briar College, and since her teens she has been showing her works in the art capitals of Europe.

Aim Is Church Art

"America has taught me something very important," says Milena in a tone of gratitude. "It has taught me to live 24 hours at a time. That is all any of us can do now."

Milena, who is descended of a long line of artists and soldiers through her Italian father and Serbian mother, has tried her hand at several artistic endeavors. Her first love was the piano, and for a time she turned to writing. "It is all a part of the same thing—creating," she explains.

Like every artist, Milena has a dream. It is to have limitless hours to draw and paint without ever having to think of workaday living. When those hours arrive Milena will devote her time to murals and church art, where she feels imagination has its greatest play.

Mme. Rybar Honored

Miss Pauletta Guffey entertained at an informal tea yesterday for Mme. Rybar, wife of the Counselor of the Yogoslav Embassy. The guests, mostly from the Diplomatic Corps, were the particular friends of the guest of honor.

To Wed May 15

New Guinea One Place Where Man-Shortage Is Non-Existent

(Editor's note: Second Lieut. Alice Radcliffe of Los Angeles is a physiotherapist at a United States Army hospital in New Guinea. Only a few women have served in this tropical battleground and she was here during the fighting at Buna barely 100 miles away. Although she, like other nurses, had no idea of what to expect when she came here four months ago, she is wiser now. In this article, written for the Associated Press, she tells something of what it's like to be an Army nurse in this former "no-woman's" land.)

By Lieut. Alice Radcliffe

Somewhere in New Guinea, May 8 (AP).—Being a woman in New Guinea is not like being a woman any place else in the world.

When we first arrived a white woman was a rare sight. As we passed along the dusty roads, truckloads of men would lean far over the side and shout "Wacco," "Hoo-Hoo" or any other demonstrative hellos they could think of.

And, too, we descended rather suddenly upon this domain of men and some of the showers were a bit too visible from the road. But our officer escorts were nice, would always attract our attention to something on the other side of the road until the danger had passed.

Bathing in Bucket No Fun at All

But after four months we are in the swing of things, although our thoughts and ambitions are a bit unique, due probably to our surroundings. You have no idea how much it would mean to us to have all the water we want—and when we want it.

For almost three months we were without showers. Bathing in a bucket—one bucket to three girls in each tent—was no fun, especially when we had to race the mosquitoes to try and keep at least one square inch of skin unbitten.

We have had numerous invitations to what some called parties. (The remainder of this paragraph was deleted by the censor.)

It's most interesting the way different outfits vie for our company. In some instances the invitation mentions that there will be ice cream. Others say they are opening a new officers' club. Still others remark they have a good dance floor.

In spite of all the entertainment available we still have our female get-togethers in our tents, where we pool our limited stocks of extra food, have a good cup of American coffee and talk about what we are going to do on leave—if and when we get it.

Day Dreams Of Leave

Most of us will spend our first day of leave in a beauty shop getting "the works." After that I, for one, would love to go into every dress shop in town and try on some cute, flashy clothes and try again to get the feel of something besides cotton khaki uniforms which, incidentally, aren't too complimentary to the average figure.

Then we want a nice room in a pub—hotel, to you—with a tub full of hot water, bath salts, bath powder, and then be able to ring for a maid to bring us a meal in bed. With all these things we might face the world with that New Guinea look erased from our faces.

"We've had our experiences, two of which I wouldn't care to repeat. One experience was getting caught on a coral reef where I spent the night in a precarious position until the tide came in and we were able to float our boat off. Then we found our rudder had gone and we were able to move only in circles.

The second one came on an innocent picnic. In trying to reach what looked like an inviting beach we bogged down in the mud and were stuck for nearly two hours. All this time the mosquitoes attacked from every angle.

I used to like to walk in the rain, but not any more. The mud is like clay and when you have to keep shoes polished it really isn't worth it.

White shirts are our only attempt at glamour. I feel really dressed when I wear one but the job of keeping "tattle tale gray" out of them is tough with no hot water or bleach. Perfume and eau de cologne help a lot. When we hear of some pilot going south by plane we flood him with requests for such things.

Girls to Get Together

I often wonder what the clerks think when these hard-fighting officers ask for some perfume, and specify the certain scent we want.

Next Sunday I hope to get together with a few of the girls to recapture for a little while the civilization we left behind. We are going to have a fashion show, using those civilian clothes we still have mildewing in our foot lockers. I only hope I don't break a leg when I try to walk in high-heeled shoes for the first time in months.

Romance is in the air, but I fear a few broken hearts will be all that's left of the glamorous tropical nights. I am looking forward to the day when we can have a grand meeting of all women and forget that so many men have been in our lives here.

But then, this is the Army.

Miss Griffith To Wed Today In Virginia

The wedding of Miss Elinor Dodge Griffith and James W. Green, jr., will take place this afternoon at 4 o'clock in Grace Episcopal Church in Berryville, Va. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Henry Lane, rector of the church.

The bride, who will be given in marriage by her stepfather, Alfred M. Kerfoot, will wear a gown of white marquisette, fashioned with bishop sleeves and train and trimmed with rose point lace. She will wear a cap made from family heirloom lace and will carry an old-fashioned bouquet of ivory rosebuds.

The bridesmaids, the Misses Dorothy Dunkle, Anna James Smith and Florence Hockett, all of Washington, will wear gowns similar to that of the bride's except that they will have full skirts without trains. They will carry baskets of white flowers tied with green velvet ribbon and wear matching ribbon bows in their hair.

Mr. Green will have as his best man Carl Russell of Washington and the ushers will be Fred Hilton, William Barr, Howard Gordon and Jack Balljohn of Washington.

The bride who is the daughter of Mrs. Alfred M. Kerfoot of Llewellyn, Clarke County, and the late Joseph Griffith of Berryville, attended Wellesley College and received her degree from Western College in Oxford, Ohio. She has been on the staff of Friendship Settlement in Washington for some time.

Mr. Green, who is the son of Mrs. J. W. Green and the late Mr. Green of Colorado Springs, Colo., is an alumnus of Colorado College and received his master's degree from Dartmouth College.

Miss Pauline Curtis Engaged to Corpl. Schuyler Hollingsworth

Mrs. John M. Gross of Four Oaks Farm, Bethlehem, Pa., formerly of Washington, and James F. Curtis of Roslyn, Long Island, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Pauline Curtis, to Corpl. Schuyler Hollingsworth of Milton, Mass., and Darkharbor, Me. The bridegroom elect is the son of Amor Hollingsworth of Milton and the late Mrs. Hollingsworth.

Miss Curtis was graduated from St. Timothy's School at Catonsville, Md., in June, 1940, and was presented to society in Washington the same month. She made her debut at a garden party with Miss Cynthia Dunn, now Mrs. Alexander Cochrane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, at the Dunns' home, and a dinner given by Mrs. Gross at the 1925 F Street Club followed.

On her maternal side Miss Curtis is the granddaughter of Mrs. William R. Merriam of La Jolla, Calif., and St. Paul, Minn., and the late Governor Merriam of Minnesota. Her paternal grandparents were the late Gen. and Mrs. Greeley S. Curtis of Boston and Manchester, Mass.

The bride-to-be has been doing war work in Washington since last July. Corporal Hollingsworth was graduated from St. Mark's School in 1936, from Harvard University in 1940 and attended Harvard Law School for a year before entering the service. He is in the Signal Corps. No date has been set for the wedding.

Paul W. Buxbaum, Noted Pianist To Direct Music Program at Tea

Directing the musical program for the tea to be held tomorrow from 4 to 7 o'clock at the Children's Museum by the Women's Auxiliary of the American Institute of Mining Engineers will be Paul Walter Buxbaum, famed concert pianist, whose time is spent nowadays entertaining servicemen.

The purpose of Sunday's tea is to furnish and maintain a lounge for service men and women stationed near American University.

Now, as in the days of the first World War when he traveled as a child prodigy over Europe with his father, Fiedrich Buxbaum, Mr. Buxbaum is devoting his talent and time to furnishing musical entertainment for soldiers.

This young musician, who was born in Vienna, Austria, and who studied piano under the concert artists, Josef Hoffman and Jan Ignace Paderewski, came to America 14 years ago. One of his most important achievements is his becoming an American citizen. As head of the music school of Thacher School in Ojai, Calif., he gave many concerts in the Middle West and Western States, and has given nearly 400 concerts for servicemen in the past two years. At Army Air bases in Alaska he enjoyed helping the boys stationed there seek their own entertainment.

His father is now in England giving similar concerts for servicemen stationed in that country. The young pianist is teaching in Washington and made many friends, including Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra, who played with Friedrich Buxbaum when he was head of the music department at the University of Vienna. To make pronunciation easier, the pianist has adopted Paul Walter as a stage name.

Assisting him in the musical program planned for Sunday will be Sergt. Richard A. Lee, poet and musician, who accompanied Mr. Buxbaum to Alaska. The Navy Music Department will also lend musicians for the occasion. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is among the patronesses for the event and will donate books for the service lounge.

Gives Dinner

Mrs. Elonzo Tyner entertained at dinner last evening in the Shoreham Blue Room in honor of Mrs. Arthur MacArthur. The Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Ralph Bard were the ranking guests.

Mrs. Allen Nash To Give Tea

Mrs. Allen Nash of Warrenton, Va., will entertain at tea this afternoon in honor of her son and daughter-in-law, Lieut. and Mrs. J. Mallory Nash, who arrived in Warrenton last week from Fort Knox, Ky., for a visit. They will divide their time between Lieut. Nash's home and Oak Hill, home of Mrs. Nash's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Alvin V. Baird, near Marshall, Va.

Before her marriage in April Mrs. Nash was Miss Marie Kay Baird.

Helen Thour Betrothed to Midshipman

Mr. and Mrs. William August Thour announce the engagement of their daughter, Helen Aileen, to Midshipman Hugh James Rosania, United States Navy, son of Ralph Rosania of Sommerville, N. J. The wedding will take place in Annapolis, Md., June 10 following Midshipman Rosania's graduation from the Naval Academy.

Miss Thour attended George Washington University and is a graduate of the Washington School for Secretaries.

'Stranger Than Fiction

Hollywood, Calif., May 7.—It was natural that Alfred Hitchcock should do the picture based on "The Earl of Suffolk," which was written up in The Post. George Sanders will play the earl, which will undoubtedly make him a big star. It was Hitchcock who first gave Sanders a sympathetic role in "Foreign Correspondent"—remember? It's a stranger-than-fiction story, or "It can't happen here"—but it did . . . Elliott Nugent just returned from New York, where he produced "Tomorrow the World," which is the story of a Nazi kid. Incidentally, the kid, Skippy Homeier, who was discovered in radio, has been signed by Louis B. Mayer. Elliott's here to do "Up in Arms" . . . Sam Bischoff talking to E. H. Griffith about doing his "Southern Hash" at Columbia.

ALFRED HITCHCOCK

Life You Dream About

Margaret Bourke-White stopped by for cocktails. Gosh, what a gal! She's made four trips to Moscow. When her ship, bound for North Africa, was torpedoed, she lost her clothes except a pair of slacks and jacket. Her pants attracted almost as much attention from the citizens in Algiers as veiled ladies there did from our soldiers. So how to get her a skirt quickly! Doolittle and Spaatz helped, but they had to go through 12 Government agencies before they could buy a yard of cloth from the French. The Germans had taken everything. Then, to find a tailor. They located one, but when it came time for a fitting, she was off on a mission, and they asked a slim-hipped sergeant to be her standin—let them fit him. He had a fit—but the skirt was fit, and presented with much pomp and ceremony by Doolittle when she returned. Doolittle, says she, has the greatest sense of humor she's come across.

Too Busy for Panic

I asked if she wasn't scared stiff when she went out with a bombing crew. "You don't have time," says she. "We were up 22,000 feet. It was 40 degrees below zero in the plane, and you're warned if you freeze your hands and feet, it's your last flight. In order to go throughout the plane to get pictures, I carried a bottle of oxygen with me. It lasts a short time. And what with watching that and my camera, and getting back to the main oxygen supply in time, it was quite a scramble. When you see huge planes disintegrate in midair and bullets whiz by your window, then you realize they're shooting at you, too.

DEATH CRASHES FROM THE SKIES!

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'Happy Go Lucky,' Earle, Is Very Elegant Nonsense

AMUSING, TUNEFUL and altogether enjoyable, "Happy Go Lucky," the new screen feature at the Earle Theater, is nicely classified by its title.

As trivial and nonsensical as it is exquisitely beautiful in its Technicolor photography, this new tropical adventure of Paramount's devotes itself exclusively to having fun with an ancient theme in new dress. It is one of those wacky romances that displays no hesitancy in making use of voodoo charms and miraculous love potions that reach their greatest efficiency under the fabled influence of that old, tropical moon, and all that silly sort of thing. In the hands of a cast of exceeding competence in catching the whimsical humor of the piece, it becomes a more than ordinarily engaging bit of fluff that cannot possibly do anybody any harm and very likely may do the jaded spirit a lot of good.

The particular Caribbean island on which the scene of the frolic is laid is not identified otherwise than by a group of calypso singers who set the atmospheric key, so to speak, but if you could by any chance locate it, it would be the perfect spot for some extremely elegant lolling. Your lolling could be done in a palatial resort hotel, among the beachcombing American lads slightly down on their luck, aboard Mr. Monroe's battleship of a yacht, or on Pete Hamilton's leaky skiff—just as happened to Mary Martin and Betty Hutton in their pursuit of Dick Powell, Rudy Vallee and Eddie Bracken. They had a marvelous time. And that's about all there is to the "plot."

Miss Martin is on the loose in quest of a multi-multi-millionaire who might be interested in buying a little dizzy housewifing with all that dough, and Miss Hutton is an entertainer serving out a term of gold-plated penury in that luxurious caravansery. Mr. Vallee is the lad whose bank account measures up to Miss Martin's imagination and the Messrs. Powell and Bracken a couple of youngsters down to their last buck who scent a cent or two in linking Miss Martin's avariciousness to Mr. Vallee's frugality and keeping Mr. Backen untrammeled by Miss Hutton's impetuous emotions. The ensuing complications are about what you would expect them to be, only more so. Difficult to explain precisely why, but yesterday's first audience—including your reporter—found itself having quite a time of it! Perhaps it was because Paramount has a way of giving these tinsel trifles high polish and a dazzling gloss.

When Not Clowning, They're Singing

Miraculously enough, Director Curtis Bernhardt has kept the thing whipping around at agreeable speed, with a pleasant blending of farcical nonsense and the frequent interjection of catchy songs. Mr. Powell and Miss Martin encounter some nice going in "Happy Go Lucky" and "Sing a Tropical Song" and the high-powered little Miss Hutton, as usual, gives "Fuddy Duddy Watchmaker" and "Murder, He Says" something of the quality of TNT. Then, too, there are those calypso chanters now and again. Oddly enough, Mr. Vallee sounds off no note, evidently concentrating of late—as in "The Palm Beach Story" and now again here—on being one of the screen's better character comedians.

The present Vallee role is a twin of the one he played in the earlier Preston Sturges number and is played with the same deadly and hilarious seriousness. For a man with all that money, Mr. Vallee brushes off more heavy dinner checks for the impecunious Miss Martin to pay than a jeep could jump over.

Eddie Backen accounts for most of the more obvious comedy with characteristic drollery. It falls to his lot to spout that line that probably has preceded the picture to every city in which it has been shown: "You only get out of a sweater what you put into it," which will serve as well as any other as an index to the flip sort of colloquy in which "Happy Go Lucky Abounds." There is a supporting cast, a brief fashion parade and more than a few added touches here and there to enhance the Technicolor splendor.

The new stage revue is a neatly arranged interval of clever diversity featured by the superior acrobatic dancing of Lyda Sue, the lusty singing of Don Arres and the comicalities of the Carr Brothers, all well and favorably known to Washington. Their individual contributions are interlarded by the spirited evolutions of the Roxyettes and preceded by the tootling of Jo Lombardi's orchestra.

The OWI's "Mission Accomplished," a ringing tribute to the efficiency of the Flying Fortress; one of the most ridiculous of the Looney Toon cartoons in color, "The Wise Quacking Duck," and the newsreel, including the captured Japanese films of Pearl Harbor and Corregidor, round out a program appropriately gaited to the belated birth of the "silly season" popularly supposed to arrive with the first warm weather.

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Glossary

New York, May 7.

REUNION: The Stage Door Canteen on W. 44th street was about to close up for the night. A young sailor started for the door, heading for his ship. Then, through the door rushed a marine, anxious to get in before closing time. They stared at each other, grinned, and shook hands. The marine was William McCracken; the sailor was his son, Willian McCracken, jr. . . . In Buffalo, last June, they enlisted on the same day. "See you at the Stage Door Canteen," each had promised the other. There were no embraces, when they finally met, by sheer chance. They just smiled and looked at each other, shook hands—and the boy left, for overseas duty.

GENE FOWLER

AILMENT: Gene Fowler has spent so much time on his biography of John Barrymore that the doctors warn him of overwork. Fowler has required so much medical treatment these past few months that he wired his publisher: "I'm getting so used to collapsing. I feel like an old opera hat."

CRITIC: One of the stories Fowler will include is the barbershop story told by Ethel Barrymore, about her father, Maurice Barrymore. The drama critic for the Police Gazette always attacked Maurice every time he reviewed a Barrymore show. They finally were introduced to each other, and the critic asked: "Mr. Barrymore, have you read my review of your show?" . . . "In the Police Gazette? No, I never read the Police Gazette," Barrymore replied. "I always shave myself."

DIFFERENCE: This probably is an apocryphal story related by Christopher Morley's friends. At 4 a .m., after he appeared on Information Please," Morley was awakened by a phone-caller who asked: "Can you tell me the difference between dialectical materialism and pure eclecticism?" . . . "How dare you wake me up at this hour, to ask me such a question?" Morley answered. "Call my office in the morning, and I'll give you the answer" . . . "In the morning," the caller replied, "I won't give a damn."

MISTAKE: The high-pressured publicity campaign on "Mission To Moscow" has stressed that the movie is a faithful, factual report of all that Ambassador Davies saw while he was a diplomat. Hollywood's best make-up artists worked long hours in getting the various actors to look exactly like the people they were portraying—Stalin, Churchill, Kalinin, Laval, the Litvinoffs, Haile Selassie, Von Ribbentrop. And finally two introductions were used, with both Davies and Walter Huston declaring that it all really happened. But an overcautious Warner Bros.' employe inserted the notice, at the beginning of the picture, that "The story, all names, characters, and incidents portrayed in this production are fictitious. No identification with actual persons, living or dead, is intended or should be inferred."

FAME: Harry Carey, the veteran cowboy star who turned, successfully, to more serious roles, was introduced to Mayor LaGuardia and they conversed for almost half an hour. When Carey left, he told Fiorello: "I'm deeply appreciative" . . . "For what?" LaGuardia shrugged. "I've done nothing for you." . . . "Oh yes you have," replied Carey, who often is mistaken for his onetime rival cowboy stars, "not once did you call me Gene, Tex, Tom or Buck."

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — This Sentry Eats Iron Rations — By Milton Caniff

OL' BROWNIE'S SETTIN' THAT PATROL BOMBUH DOWN LIKE A SLEEPIN' INFANT!... WE'AH FIXED!
ALL EXCEPT OUR PRIVATE DUNKIRK!
THE NIPS ARE SURE TO FILTER IN A FEW SNIPERS TO FEEL US OUT—
WE MUST GIVE THE IMPRESSION THAT WE'RE A LARGE FORCE!
AND KEEP THEM AT A DISTANCE AS LONG AS POSSIBLE—SO I'VE RIGGED A REMOTE CONTROL FIRING LINE!
WHAT MANNER OF MEN ARE THOSE YANKEES? OUR GRENADES HAVE NO EFFECT!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

IF YOU'RE WAITING FOR SHORTY, IT'S LOVE'S LABOR LOST, TOM! SHE LEFT AN HOUR AGO!
I KNOW--WITH LOU VARZONI! THAT'S WHY I WANT TO TALK TO YOU!
POP GOES MY PRIDE! I THOUGHT YOU'D TUMBLED AT LAST FOR MY FATAL ALLURE!
SALLY--CAN'T YOU BRING PATTI TO HER SENSES?--YOU KNOW VARZONI'S REPUTATION!
MR. TATTLE, YOU'RE SPEAKING OF THE HEEL I LOVE!
RATS! I KNOW IT'S BEEN ONLY A BROADWAY ROMANCE WITH YOU--BUT PATTI TAKES THE GUY SERIOUSLY! SHE OUGHT TO BE WARNED--!
SOME DAY, TOMMY, YOUR PAPER WILL BLOSSOM OUT WITH HEADLINES ABOUT LOU--BUT IT MAY BE TOO LATE --AND NOW, FORGET I EVER SAID THAT!

MICKEY FINN — The Real Thing! — By Lank Leonard

IMAGINE PHIL PAYING FIVE DOLLARS FOR THAT LUCKY CHARM! DO YOU THINK HE'S LOSING HIS MIND--WORRYING OVER MICKEY AND TOM?
NO, FLOSSIE! BUT I DO BELIEVE HE WAS ONLY THINKING OF THEM WHEN HE BOUGHT IT—HOPING IT MIGHT BRING THEM BACK TO US SAFE!
THE WINNER IN THE THIRD RACE AT 10 TO 1! EXCELSIOR!
BY GOLLY, CLANCY! IT WORKS!

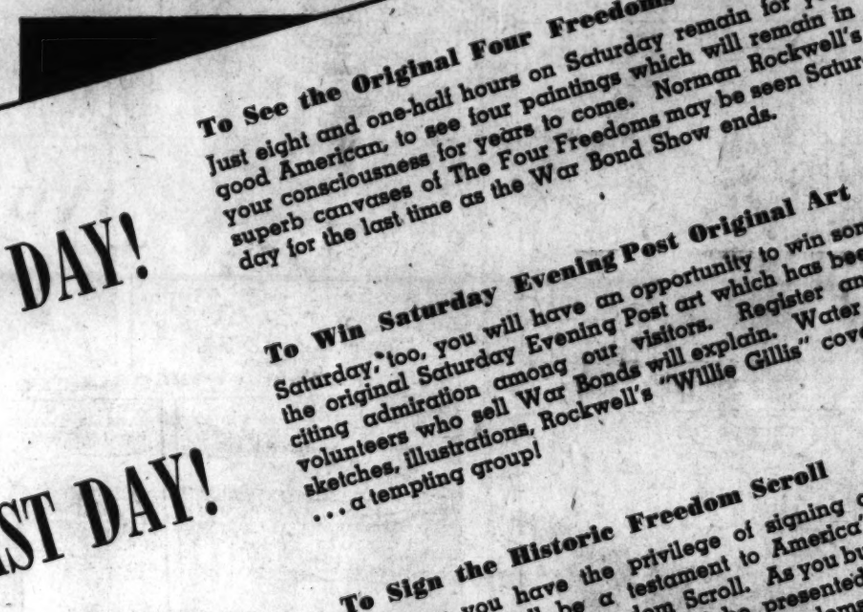
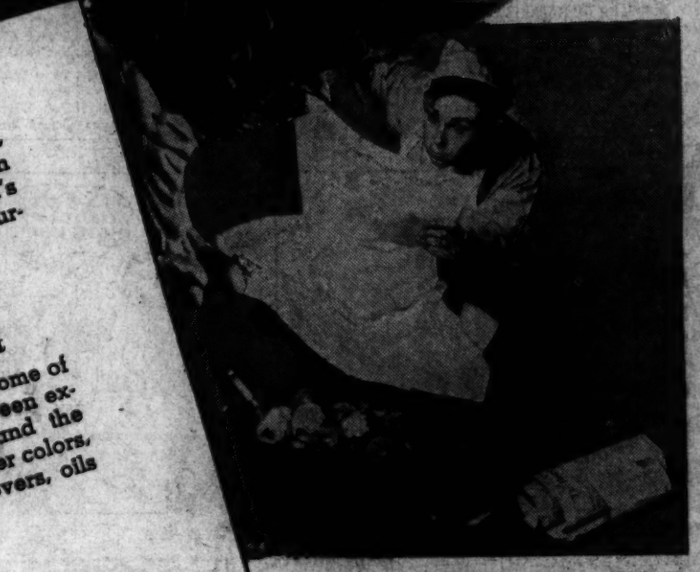
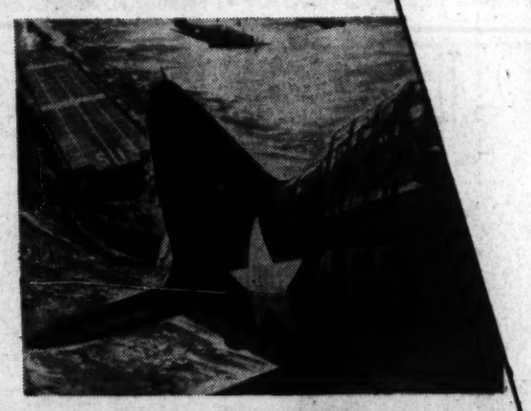
OF THE UNITED STATES TREASURY DEPARTMENT-SATURDAY EVENING POST

FOUR FREEDOMS WAR BOND SHOW







LAST DAY!

LAST DAY!

LAST DAY!

LAST DAY!

To See the Original Four Freedoms Paintings

Just eight and one-half hours on Saturday remain for you, good American, to see four paintings which will remain in your consciousness for years to come. Norman Rockwell's superb canvases of The Four Freedoms may be seen Saturday for the last time as the War Bond Show ends.

To Win Saturday Evening Post Original Art

Saturday, too, you will have an opportunity to win some of the original Saturday Evening Post art which has been exciting admiration among our visitors. Register and the volunteers who sell War Bonds will explain. Water colors, sketches, illustrations, Rockwell's "Willie Gillis" covers, oils . . . a tempting group!

To Sign the Historic Freedom Scroll

Saturday you have the privilege of signing a document which may well be a testament to America's Independence, in 1943—The Freedom Scroll. As you buy your bond, sign your name. The Scroll will be presented to President Roosevelt, who inspired The Four Freedoms—at the conclusion of the War Bond Show.

To Obtain Commemorative Bond Covers

Yes, the last day to acquire the commemorative covers which the United States Treasury Department issued to protect the War Bonds and War Stamps bought here. Appropriately, The Freedom of Speech was chosen from Norman Rockwell's four paintings, to illustrate this souvenir. It will be a treasure of the future!

To See Helen Virginia Meyer's Fashion Shows

Don't miss seeing the entertaining, educational, fashion revue so cleverly staged by Helen Virginia Meyer, noted costume historian. Her models will wear beautiful and fascinating gowns worn by famous women in American history and uniforms from World War I. Shows at 11:30, 3:30.

The Hecht Co. is deeply grateful to the United States Treasury Department and The Saturday Evening Post for co-sponsoring this magnificent exhibit. We thank sincerely the people of Washington who proved their faith in the survival of The Four Freedoms by buying almost a million dollars worth of War Bonds here! We thank the hundred thousand intensely interested Americans who attended the War Bond Show, who looked at Norman Rockwell's paintings with emotion and exaltation, who enjoyed every minute of the show with us. We remind everyone who participated in this event of its purpose . . . which was accomplished . . . the sale of War Bonds to shorten our days of war and woe and lengthen our years of peace and plenty in America.
